Juliet has a secret stash of snacks!

Just after her kitten's suckling dinner yesterday, Juliet sneaked away to go behind the food and water bowls and eat something from her secret stash of snacks. It's not the first time that cameras have noticed her looking behind the food and water bowls, and it's the second time that they have seen her head stay out of sight for a while.

From previous purchases and orders, North, a multi species behaviorist has traced a path from Juliet to an unhealthy snack called Kudo's. The snacks have a sky - high calorie count, and Juliet is already taking in enough calories as it is. The snack looks like a flattened cheese puff, and it is very salty, but very sweet at the same time. Thus, there is a lot of sodium and sugar, which makes Kudo's even more unhealthy.

"A little more of this, and Juliet will face gaining a whole lot of weight," says Makenna, a well known dietary scientist. This just starts to explain all the reasons why Juliet shouldn't be eating Kudo's secretly.

"I once was addicted to Kudo's too," says Harvey, who is in a cat recovery center after he was abandoned on the street. "I gained a ton of weight, as you can see in my belly still (image on the right), but now that I've stopped eating them, I've been healthier, and I'm losing weight."

After a thorough investigation, Juliet's kits managed to find 10 full Kudo's bags hidden behind the food and water bowls. They brung them to Mavis, who disappeared for a second, and then came back with her hands empty. Now that the actual food was gone, the only thing left to do was to wait.

After Juliet woke up from her nap and let her kittens suckle, a secret camera showed her snuffling around the empty spot where the Kudo's had been, and she was surprised to find it empty. She began looking around for the missing bags, but they were no where to be found. Now that the junky food was gone, Juliet would hopefully be a healthier cat. But the question that some cats are asking themselves is "where did Juliet get this many bags of Kudos?"

"Oh mama, why did you have to addict yourself to junk food?"

Well, that will have to be a mystery for another day. We can only hope that Juliet does not have a way to get more Kudo's, because that would be very bad and unhealthy.
