
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Someone has posted the photo below with a rhyme!

Yesterday, around dinner time when Mavis and Naya were eating with their kittens in their temporary home at Lemon's palace, Judy texted Mavis a post by an unknown cat from her account. The post included the photo above, which Mavis had thought was lost to the internet, and an embarrassing rhyme that even Mavis had to admit was clever. The rhyme went like this: Mavis and Naya sitting in a room, ANGRY! ANGRY! BOOM BOOM BOOM!

Image above - Mavis and Naya in a room together.

Naya gawked at this post when she saw it. It was very clever, and the photo went with it perfectly. What Naya couldn't believe was that some cat had posted this on the internet (Catstagram, to be specific). This photo is embarrassing, but with the rhyme, Naya has finally felt defeat. This unknown cat is now the new leader of the “trolls” on the internet (this will be explained another time).

When something like this happened, Mavis would usually call Stripy for advice. However, because Stripy is still missing, Mavis will have to figure this out on her own. Judy, on the other hand, is having no trouble coming up with theories on who could be posting these videos. Judy thinks that someone from that awesome magazine Cats Illustrated is posting them, while Rudy argues that she thinks that Judy is posting them. Mavis has zero patience for this, so she throws them out of the house.

Naya has a different solution to this. On the right, you can see her latest post to all of the suspects that she suspects of posting the rhyme and the photo. When they click on the link that she gave them, will get a virus that will scan their fingerprints and check to see if they have gone on to Judy’s account. If they did not, the virus will disappear. If they did, Naya will get an alert about their location and name, and the cat’s computer will shut down permanently and their account and posts will be deleted forever, unless they make a new account under a different name. Stripy would have said that Naya’s test is “too harsh” but Stripy isn’t there to say that, so Naya thinks that she can do as she pleases.

“If this goes on, there will eventually be a movie called “Naya breaks the internet”!”

- HARVEY

Mavis is annoyed with the person who posted the photo and the rhyme, but she didn’t take it as seriously as Naya. Someone just wanted to play a joke, Mavis thinks. No big deal. However, Mavis is concerned about Naya’s measures to find the culprit. I guess Naya doesn’t want to be remembered as the “internet prankster who got pranked”. Well, Mavis wouldn’t either. Mavis would be interested in finding this cat, though.

Subscribe again to find out more about this mysterious prankster!

To: All Cats who want to be famous on the Internet
Click here for more information

From: Nayacat

Image above - a screenshot of Naya’s “sick” post.

Get it? She posted a virus, so it’s “sick”?

I don’t know why I included that.