
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Lunch has won the lottery!

Lunch, who Judy learned soon after she took her in, is a cat who loves to participate in the lottery. This year she bought a ticket for every single lottery you could participate in, and this time, she got very, very lucky with one of her tickets.

At 10:00 P.M. last night, Lunch's name was called on one of the lotteries. She cheered louder than you can imagine. Judy came over to see what was going on, and then she started cheering too. Lunch would be able to go and collect her check for guess what: 10 million dollars! This would get Lunch a new house, she could put a couple million into saving, and she could give away some money to her friends. Lunch was already planning to tip Judy for letting her stay in Judy's house, but Lunch had already made friends with her half sisters, and they might receive a sizable check, too. Of course, Harvey would receive some to make some improvements on his therapy office, which is well needed.

Image above - Lunch, watching the TV hopefully as the lottery winners are announced.

"There were like 15 million cats in this lottery," says Lunch, who is overcome with excitement, "and I was the lucky one! This money is going to help me in years to come! I won't even need to participate in the lottery anymore!"

Naya is wondering how big the check might be that she could get. She tried to vouch for 10% of the whole lottery money as a "fellow lottery participator" but Lunch smartly turned her down and promptly gave her a check for 100 thousand dollars. Mavis and the rest of Lunch's half sisters received double that, because they kept their mouths shut. Rudy nearly screamed in rage when Lunch gave Judy an extra 50 thousand dollars because she had let Lunch stay in her house. Judy was happy with this bonus, but Mavis was even happier when Judy set aside a thousand dollars for a cabbage buying fund just in case. You buy cabbages for Mavis, Mavis does things for you.

Image above - Rudy, who is thinking about getting revenge on Lunch.

"Think of the damage a Jeep could do with Harvey behind the wheel!"

- NORTH, WHO DOESN'T WANT TO FIND OUT

Harvey was very excited to get the money because he really wanted a sand pit so that his clients could shape their feelings or just relax if they felt like it. However, North had to talk Harvey out of buying a monster size Jeep. Harvey was very disappointed, because the Jeep had extra cushiony seats that would make him feel relaxed while driving. North was especially worried because Harvey didn't pass his driving test this year and had to pay a fee after he hit 3 mailboxes, a garbage can, and smashed up the test car when he crashed into a wall by accident.

Subscribe again to hear more about Lunch!