

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

Harvey has told North about his mind reading powers!

Last night, just before Harvey went to bed, he tapped North on the shoulder as North was making his way out, to tell him about his new mind reading powers. North scoffed at first and told Harvey to tell him what he was thinking about. Harvey looked carefully at North, and told him what was going on in his head.

Image above - Harvey, tapping North with a “come here so I can talk to you” tap on the shoulder.

---

“You met Naya at Taco caT today and you have a date scheduled for later this week. Also, you’re looking forward to it.” Harvey stopped as North turned beet red. “Oh wow,” North said, “you can read my mind.”

Ever since this incident, North has been calling the cats he knows (not cats he works with, but friends and family), and is telling them about Harvey's new mind reading powers. He is guessing that they are a side effect from being injected with too much life force from another cat. Cats agree with this, but they are also curious to see if Harvey can read their minds. Smoke and Reposado had to drive back 10 cats (kittens of Mavis and Naya) who were banging on the door of Harvey's therapy office when a session was going on. Harvey called Mavis and Naya before it got too out of control.

Mavis hasn't been out of her house since she had her bizarre interaction with the mystery caller at the grocery store. Harvey had a feeling that she was going to try and meet with them again, to get some answers. However, Harvey didn't want to read Mavis's mind without her permission. He could rely on instinct. Still, Harvey would have to check on Mavis every once and a while to see if she would openly tell him her plans.

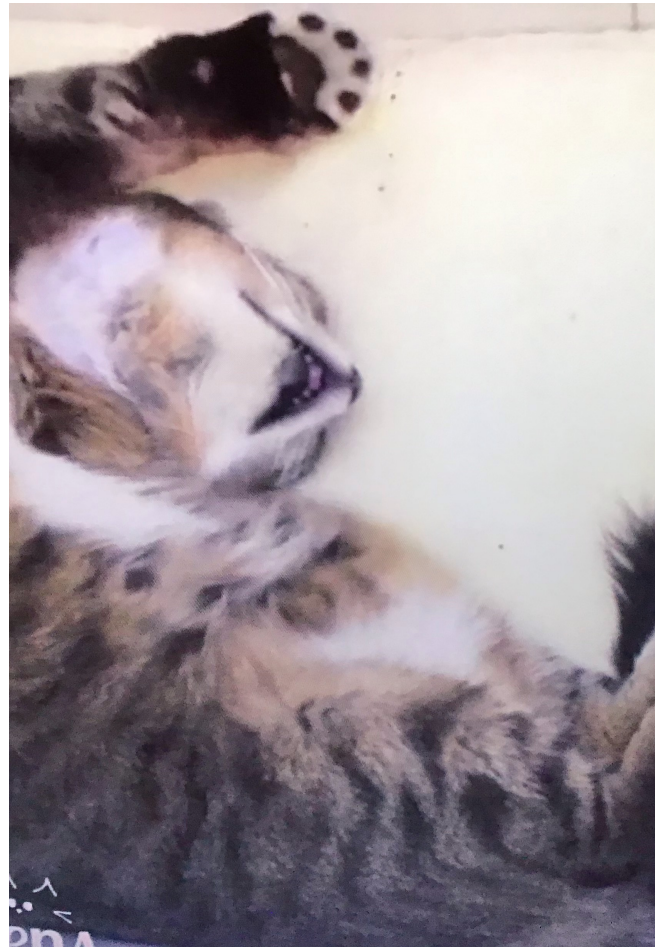

Image above - Harvey, after a stressing day of people coming to knock on his door and ask to have their minds read.

Naya had all of these crazy ideas about how to manipulate Harvey's mind reading powers to do all the things she wanted. Harvey said no immediately, and even held his ground when Naya promised him she'd buy him enough snacks to stock up her cupboard. This could be a lot of snacks, and Harvey would have said yes if Naya's cupboard could barely fit 1 jumbo bag of cheese puffs. However, Harvey knew that Naya wouldn't give in that easily. His suspicion was confirmed when Naya promised to put 10,000 dollars into a snack fund for him. Harvey left before he could be tempted into anything.

“Could Harvey read Naya's mind and see if she is looking forward to our date?”

- NORTH, WHO'S NERVOUS ABOUT HIS DATE

Lots of cats are still puzzled with Harvey's new mind reading power, and Harvey doesn't think he should announce it to the public. The results could be disastrous.

Subscribe again to hear more about the mystery caller, Harvey's mind reading, and North's date!