

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

Judy is hosting a giant Easter egg hunt at her house!

Yesterday, it was Easter for cats. Some cats had a big special meal. Others spent the day in church. However, Judy was up all night on Monday night preparing for a giant Easter egg hunt that was taking place in her backyard. It was specifically for her family (it is a very big one), but any cat who saw what was going on and got interested could join in too. But Judy might have taken it too far by hiding 500 eggs in her backyard. It is massive, but there was not enough space for 500 eggs. So, Judy signed a contract with her neighbor who also had a massive backyard, and they temporarily connected the backyards so that there was enough space for the Easter egg hunt.

Image above - Judy, who was up all night hiding 500 eggs in her massive backyard.

---

Even North, a multi species behaviorist, was invited to the Easter egg hunt. He had just turned 1 year old a couple of weeks ago, and was just about to reach the point where he couldn't do Easter egg hunts anymore. He was extremely excited about this, especially when Judy rented a slide to go down the large hill in her backyard. However, cats seemed to go down the slide too fast, and after a lot of bargaining, Judy got Harvey to use his belly and back as a cushion for the cats coming down the slide. This is a pretty rough job, and Judy should be patting herself on the back for getting Harvey to do it. However, she was worrying about retaliation from Mavis when Judy would turn her 1,000 dollar fund for cabbages into a 1,000 dollar fund for Harvey's personal snacking.

Makenna was worried about Harvey when Judy told her what he had agreed to do. However, her concerns vanished when Mavis, a pretty large cat, came down the slide, and slammed into Harvey. Harvey rocked, but didn't fall down. Then, he looked over at Judy and smiled. Judy smacked herself on the forehead. Harvey had obviously done this before, and now she was paying him 1,000 dollars in snacks. Judy had been swindled by a master.

Image above - Harvey, who's wondering what cats slamming into him will do for his joints.

“Too bad Judy won't fall for that one a second time in a row - It was profitable.”

- HARVEY, WHO'S FEELING PROUD OF HIMSELF

Yesterday, the Easter egg hunt went extremely well. However only 472 of the eggs were found, so there would be some more that seemed to pop up out of nowhere. About 40 cats were at the Easter egg hunt when it ended, and everyone got a fair share of eggs.

Harvey had struck it rich. Some mama and father cats didn't like how fast the slide was, but when they saw Harvey at the bottom, they literally went over and tipped him. He ended up pulling in 200 dollars in tips, but refused to take that much out of the snack fund even after Judy begged. Harvey had truly won the round.

Subscribe again for more fun events!