Judy has messed up North and Naya's date!

After going to Naya's house to get some answers, Naya answered Harvey's questions and told him and North that Judy had told her that North had another date. While North and Naya worked out the plans for another date, Harvey stormed around the living room of Naya's house, fuming. He was chubby - scratching furiously, when a rubber band hit him smack in the middle of the chubby foreleg. Without looking behind him, Harvey pinpointed the location of his assailant, found the escape route, and threw a book behind him. A "oof" told Harvey that he had hit his target. Fast as lightning, Harvey turned and leaped at his stunned target, who happened to be one of Naya's kittens. That was why Harvey didn't hit him in 4 different places that would paralyze his legs for 2 hours.

North and Naya told Harvey (after he had calmed down) that they were going to Judy's house to have a talk with her. Judy shouldn't be involved in North and Naya's relationship, and she shouldn't try to meddle with it. However, North and Naya should have just snuck out, because when Harvey got that idea in his head, he charged straight at the closed door. With an enormous force slammed against it, the door gave way, only 1 hinge still connected to the wall. Harvey ran, full tilt in the direction of Judy's house which was a full 3 miles away. Naya looked forlornly at her broken door and then, she and North took after Harvey before he could damage anymore doors.

Even with 3 legs, Harvey arrived at Judy's house with a time that would make any athlete proud. North and Naya were far back, and Harvey wasn't planning on waiting for them. He stood at the sidewalk, lined up his charge, and then ran, head down at the door. Harvey had remembered to put a helmet on, and it just enhanced the thundering power of his charge. However, this was a solid oak door, which no cat should have been able to charge through. But this was a special incident. And luckily, Judy's security camera got a good video of it or no cat would have believed what happened. As Harvey charged, adrenaline from rage filling his veins, he sped up to a speed that was not supposed to be possible, and then, he lifted his shoulder at the last moment, one of the strongest parts of his body. And, when Harvey's momentum slammed against it, the oak door shattered into a million tiny shards of wood. In the house, Max looked up from where he was sewing up a hole in Judy's underwear. Ice and Maxine looked up from their large stacks of homework. Harvey looked around, and then, all energy draining out of him, he collapsed.
