
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Juliet is allergic to chocolate!

Last night, Juliet had an allergic reaction. It was pretty serious, so Blackpelt, her mate, rushed her to the hospital right away. The doctors gave Juliet allergy medicine, and once she could breathe normally, they did an x - ray on her stomach to see if the thing she was allergic to was food. In the stomach x - ray, the doctors found out that there was chocolate in her system. They asked Blackpelt and Juliet some questions, and came to a solution. Juliet was allergic to chocolate. Many cats felt bad when they heard this, but the doctors weren't finished yet. Juliet wasn't allergic to the chocolate bar, she was allergic to the cacao in the chocolate. The bar advertised 35% cacao, which is why the allergic reaction was this great. However, a bar with 70 to 80% cacao could close up Juliet's windpipe completely for a short period of time. Juliet was also lucky that the bar of chocolate didn't have more cacao than it did.

Image above - Juliet, who hasn't been feeling too well after she ate that bar of chocolate.

"I really liked the chocolate," Juliet told the press, "I loved the slight crunch, and the chocolaty goodness. I liked how it melted in my mouth, and formed into a rich sauce if you let it sit long enough. However, couldn't I get chocolate without cacao in it?" After this question, a doctor came over and promptly told Juliet the facts. "Chocolate wouldn't be chocolate without the cacao. Unfortunately Juliet, you will never be able to eat chocolate unless your allergy goes away naturally or after treatment." Juliet's shoulders sagged, and even more so when Juliet saw a photo Naya sent her of Naya eating a bite of chocolate with her eyes closed in appreciation. Juliet typed an angry reply back to Naya.

"Are you sure I am allergic to chocolate," Juliet asked the doctors, "I mean, I can eat chocolate ice cream just fine, so why not chocolate." The doctors nodded, understanding Juliet's question. However, they had a response. "Chocolate ice cream is made with chocolate flavoring, which doesn't usually contain any cacao. If it did, it would be written on the box." Juliet's shoulders sagged, again. She really wanted to be able to eat chocolate.

Image above - Juliet's imagination.

“Chocolate - wow! That's one thing I really couldn't live without!”

- HARVEY, WHO MAKES CHOCOLATE PART OF HIS EVERYDAY DIET.

Mavis wasn't sending Juliet any texts. Apparently, from Harvey's point of view, Mavis was a little bit spooked by the mystery caller and was getting a little paranoid. Now, she liked to just get grocery deliveries to her house. However, Harvey knew that Mavis had gotten a third call from the mystery caller. She was still deciding about whether to answer it. However, Harvey had sent Mavis a package of chocolates, he knew it was her favorite. Juliet was still sulking about not being able to eat chocolate.

Subscribe again for more on Juliet's cacao allergy!