

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

COVID-19 is clearing up for cats!

After a long and hard year of COVID-19 struggles, things are starting to clear up for cats. There are barely any cats still sick in the hospitals, and doctors and nurses have more than enough ventilators, cures, and vaccines for cats. Many cats have been vaccinated already, and the only cats who haven't been vaccinated are the kittens, who come last. However, this is excellent news for all cats, that a very scary virus's rampage may have come, finally, to an end.

Image above - a doctor cat, after giving out good news in a news briefing.

---

"There has been a streak of good things recently," says North, a multi species behaviorist, "I mean, Mavis got a ticket to see Cathamilton, Judy got an offer to get one of her movies published, and now this. It's very nice to see some traces or normality. However, Harvey still doesn't have his Jeep back from the repair shop yet. The bill is quite large - but so is the amount of time that it will take to get the Jeep up and driving again. Harvey may have to wait a while more." Harvey is nearly out of the hospital, and his conversations now also include sugar.

Rudy, one of the cats hit hardest by the COVID-19 virus, was one of the first to be vaccinated nearly 2 weeks ago. She had gotten very sick with the virus, and now, finally, she was protected from it. "I am so relieved that I will never have to feel that shortness of breath and the sickness by the name of COVID-19 again," says Rudy, who is, in fact very relieved. She even paid the people who vaccinated her. "I feel a lot safer with the vaccine - even if things aren't completely back to normal yet. I can't wait to be able to hug strangers again!" Most cats were puzzled and a little bit shocked by this remark. Judy had something to say.

"Hugging strangers Rudy? Really," Judy told Rudy, scoffing. "If you want to show happiness for things that are going back to normal, you should at least try and go to a jam packed theater! I can't wait to get way too much popcorn and then invite Harvey along so he can eat it." Rudy scoffed right back at Judy. "Is that what you call normal, Judy?"

Normal is the way your chubby forelegs ought to be!" Judy snarled, and leaped at Rudy. They tussled, exchanging insults.

"Rudy and Judy can think of cleverer and cleverer insults all day."

- MAVIS, WHO'S THINKING ABOUT MAKING A MOVIE ABOUT RUDY AND JUDY

magical barrier. Yes, it sounds silly, but there have been behavior studies conducted by North that prove the truth of my statement.

Subscribe again for a sudden change in events!

Image above - Kiwi, who's laughing at Rudy and Judy while they were tussling.