
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Yesterday was Mother's Day!

Yesterday was a very special day for many cats, especially mama cats. It was Mother's Day! Many mother cats from across the world had a special day for them. Some of the celebrations and appreciations that happened were things like breakfast delivered to your resting place, chocolates sent in the mail, and also cards and a few gifts given.

Image above - Lunch, after enjoying a special breakfast on the shelf from her kittens.

"Makenna is my stepmother, and stepmother's day is just a week away. We'll sure be proud to celebrate her then," says North, a multi species behaviorist, "however, Mother's Day makes me wonder who my biological mother was. Harvey doesn't want to talk about her, because she abandoned him with their kittens. She may not even still be alive - she would be about the same age as Harvey if she were still alive.” North sighed, “sometime I am going to try and track her down. I can barely picture her face, and I don’t even know her name.”

Cats gave their best wishes to Mavis, a mama cat. Some of these best wishes included a free casserole, a coupon for half off an Ice Cream sundae at Rebecca’s Ice Cream shop, and a couple of bad words in a text from Naya. Rudy and Judy both wanted to please Mavis, so they each bought her cabbages. Mavis took both loads of cabbages without a second glance and shut the door. Rudy and Judy had wasted money and time.

Juliet’s special day included some cacao free artificially flavored chocolate from Blackpelt. Juliet nearly cried when she saw it, it looked so good. Cats gave her their best wishes, which included 3 particularly shiny cabbages from Mavis, a free meal from Lunch’s Luncheon, and a sarcastic comment about how much Juliet would be worshipped on this “special day” from Naya.

Rudy and Judy’s Mother’s days were about the same. They got some special treatment from their kittens and mates, but Rudy and Judy only had eyes for each other. In the street, someone filmed Rudy and Judy circling each other, saying things like, “I got to play a game with my kittens!” And, “Bah - I got to go for a special Ice Cream”. It sounded as if Rudy and Judy were comparing their days to make each other feel less special and cared for by their mates and kittens. There was quite a large grudge between them ever since Judy’s Chubby foreleg incident (It’s in yesterday’s issue).

However, this was a pretty petty way to get back at each other. Cats are getting bored with Rudy and Judy’s feud and hate of each other.

Subscribe again for more on Rudy and Judy’s feud!

Image above - Harvey, who accidentally slept in and forgot to go and get takeout breakfast from Makenna’s favorite Italian restaurant.

“Naya didn’t receive any gifts from cats she had insulted today.”

- LATTE, ONE OF NAYA’S KITTENS