
CATS ILLUSTRATED

North is watching the “movie” from inside Harvey’s mind!

“I’ve made a movie about Harvey,” Ice told North, Makenna, and Naya, who were currently in the hospital, “It’s a tribute to Harvey, and I’d think you’d want to see it before it gets shown at his funeral. If any of you don’t want to see it, feel free to go to another room.” North, Naya, and Makenna all stayed put, waiting for Ice to start the movie. “Okay then,” Ice told them and went in the back to talk to the doctor.

Image above - Lunch, who has been notified of Harvey’s current situation.

“Are the machines set up, and the “movie” we’re going to see is actually projected from Harvey’s mind?” Ice asked the doctor in a hushed tone, “because I will kill you if you just played us a regular movie.” The doctor shivered, but stood their ground. “I can promise you I will show you, North, Makenna, and Naya the movie, but I can't promise that it will end out all right. Whether Harvey wins or loses, you will have to tell North, Makenna, and Naya what was going on. And unfortunately, I've dug up some mortality rates from other patients infected by the American red flower nectar, and from what I could study, only 1 of the 124 patients ever infected ended up defeating the monsters in their mind." Ice whistled. "Well, Harvey's about to become number 2." (If you think that Harvey is turning to poop, you are sadly mistaken).

Ice aligned the projector so that it blocked the view of the extra machines hooked up to Harvey. The doctor flipped a switch, and Ice turned on the projector. There was a bit of static for a moment, and then the movie seemed to start. At first, Ice couldn't tell what was going on. The movie seemed to take place in a house, where Harvey's version of himself was sitting at a table counting out small white cubes, and then tossing them into the air and eating them.

"Sugar really is so sweet," Harvey's version of himself (other Harvey), had a slightly deeper voice and was at least 2 times taller than he was in real life. "It's time to go and fight those pesky Waterbirds." And with that, other Harvey got up from his chair, hefted a heavy battle ax, and walked as fast as he could out of his house with his 3 legs.

Image above - Harvey's motionless body in the machine. It's pretty subtly hidden, huh?

"Poor Harvey - trapped in his very own mind! That is so scary sounding!"

- LUNCH, WHO'S REALLY FEELING FOR HARVEY RIGHT NOW

Interesting, Ice thought. Harvey would imagine himself with all 4 legs if he could, but what if he couldn't even remember what it was like? Or what if he was just born with 3 legs?

As other Harvey made his way out of the hut, North turned to Ice and the doctor with a question. "How did you get it to look exactly like Harvey, just bigger?" Ice pretended to think, and then answered. "It was very realistic animation. I bet, without the extra side and deep ness of voice, Harvey couldn't tell himself apart." North whistled. "That's a large claim." Then, they got back to the "movie".

Subscribe again for more on this "movie"!