

CATS ILLUSTRATED

Since Harvey's body is gone, the "movie" has stopped!

Since Harvey's body went missing, the "movie" was stopped. It happened all of a sudden, while Harvey was fighting some more monsters (don't worry, you didn't miss much). The screen went black, and North ran over to the machine to check on Harvey. Harvey's body wasn't there, and North panicked. A little later, the police chief reported to Ice that the thief cat had somehow escaped the prison. The details were vague, because no officers had been hurt, knocked out, or even notified that something was wrong. It was almost as if the thief cat had vanished into thin air. And, with the disappearance of Harvey's body, Ice knew that the two were somehow linked. Ice called Rice and Rice jr. and told them what was happening.

Image above - Rudy, who is worried for Harvey.

However, Rudy put up a fight about Rice going. Juliet was asleep when Rice jr. left, but she would have been just as reluctant. Rudy blocked the door, and even when Rice said, “Mama, please can we do this the easy way? I don’t want to hurt you!”

Rudy scoffed. “Rice, please don’t go, it’s too dangerous. Also, you couldn’t overpower me if you tried.” This was not true, but then suddenly, Judy burst through the door of Rudy’s house waving a sword. “Come with me, Rudy, and you too, Rudy’s kittens! We must help Ice in his fight to find the thief cat!” And in the split second that Rudy turned away, Rice pushed her down, and jumped on her belly, using Rudy’s soft belly as a trampoline to get out the high windows of the house, which happened to be open. Then, as Rudy gasped for breath, Rice ran out to the street where Ice’s car was waiting. Back in her house, Rudy sat up. “We’re going all right,” she said in a low, dangerous tone. “Rice or any other one of my kittens do not jump on my belly.” Judy cheered, and raced out to her minivan which was already equipped with war instruments. I mean, you don’t find a cannon on the top of a regular car.

Image above - Rudy, who is absolutely furious with Rice for using her belly as a trampoline.

“I can’t believe the thief cat escaped prison so easily - it took me a week!”

- NAYA, FROM EXPERIENCE

Judy hopped in the driver’s seat, and Rudy jumped up to the roof of the car and sat in the seat meant for the gunner. Rudy was in a little pod, protected from wind. The cannon had sights on it, and it was very high quality. Also, there was food in the pod. Snacks, drinks, and other yummy things. Rudy watched smugly as her kittens squished in with Judy’s kittens. In the end, 3 of Rudy’s kittens had to sit on the laps of Judy’s kittens. Also, Rudy suspected that Blackspots jr. had taken the trunk. No matter, Rudy thought. I’m going to teach Rice a lesson for jumping on my belly (if you’re appalled at a mama cat wanting to teach their kitten a lesson, don’t be. It happens quite often, and mama cat is never troubled again).

Subscribe again for a great chase!