

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

The terrorist has maliciously bombed Juliet's house!

Last night, when every cat in Juliet's home was asleep, the terrorist bombed Juliet's house. It was quick, but fatal. Juliet's roof is not half as strong as Rudy's, and the ceiling boards gave way after the first explosion. The remaining bombs fell into her house, and they exploded in rapid succession after hitting the ground. The explosion destroyed Juliet's kitchen and living room, and one bomb nearly penetrated her basement where Juliet, Blackpelt, and her kittens were sleeping. But of course, they were wide awake now. After a little bit, Juliet went upstairs to see the damage to her house.

Image above - Juliet, who was terrified when she heard the first bomb explode on the top of her house.

---

The bombs had left catastrophe in their wake. Juliet's kitchen and living room were completely destroyed. The cabinets were broken, the sofa was smoldering, the countertop was scratched, and the fridge had a big hole in its door. Also, to Juliet's dismay, her kittens' TV in the living room was hanging askew on the wall, cracked in several places. Back in the basement, Blackpelt led Juliet's kittens up the stairs so that they could observe the damage. Blackpelt gasped when he saw everything. Juliet's home was wrecked.

Well now, cats are wondering why Juliet's house was targeted by such a malicious attack. North, a multi species behaviorist, has some thoughts on this. "Well, I think we can all assume that the bomber cat has seen the video Juliet posted on catTube," North has pointed out, "and I think that the bomber cat located Juliet's home, and then maliciously attacked it. It was a very bad thing to do, and, I am hearing that damage to Juliet's home is fatal. She has already called several insurance companies to get money to pay for some repairs, including a new fridge, some new cabinets, and even a new TV for her kittens." North has expressed some interesting thinking, and some of his theories may be right.

Image above - Lunch, who's really feeling for Juliet right now.

"Who knew plain sugar was this good?"

- JULIET, BLACKPELT, AND WILBUR SPOTS, ALL OF WHOM HAVE HAD AT LEAST 5 SUGAR CUBES

Today, Juliet received a very heavy package from a somber looking Harvey. Juliet guessed what was in the package. Wads of money. What was really in the package? Cubes of sugar. Juliet shrugged and popped a sugar cube into her mouth. Quite good, she thought. She ate another one. But before she could eat more plain sugar, Blackpelt came over to Juliet, grabbed the large box of sugar cubes, put some in the small jar that Juliet kept around, and then put the rest in a cupboard. Juliet thought she saw Blackpelt pop a few into his mouth, though. Harvey had meant well, but he might have just gotten his kitten addicted to sugar, so much like him.

Subscribe again for a catch!