
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Mavis is joining a dance club!

After any catastrophe, such as the bombing incident of 2021, cats strive to try new things. Mavis, for one, is joining a dance club. Lunch has started yoga. Rudy and Judy have become friends. Sort of. However, Mavis has shown the most startling change because Naya has claimed (however true that might be) that Mavis has hated dancing all her life. But then again, that's what a disaster is for. Getting you to try new things.

Image above - Mavis, turning down food and getting ready to go to the dance club.

Mavis's first night at the dance club is tonight. She is going to try and make a good impression on some of the more senior club members, and will be wearing the first clothes she ever got. They have a high net worth, as they may be the first clothes ever made or worn. However, they work just as well at other clothes. However, while Mavis makes her final preparations for a long night at the dance club, we have come across a problem. You see, we would love to have a reporter sneak into the dance club incognito, but that is technically stalking and club infiltration. We cannot exactly place a camera or fly a small drone in either. Right now, we have a plan, a backup plan, a plan C, and a last resort plan.

The plan is to have an undercover go up to the club and pretend that they were invited. We do know somebody in the club, but they are not exactly friendly. However, if this plan doesn't work, 2 computer hackers will look for security cameras and try (if there is a camera or 2) to get a live feed of the club. However, most clubs don't have security cameras, so this may not work. The third option is to come back to the front door of the club, with 2 thug cats and demand entry. This would probably disrupt the club and ruin the incognito business, but at least we'd have a reporter in the club.

Image above - Judy, who's wondering why she had to have so many kittens.

The last and final option is the least attractive by far. No cat wants to put a computer chip on Mavis herself, because that is going a bit too far. Hopefully we will not have to resort to that. But now, Mavis is leaving for the club. Plan 1 is going into action.

Plan 1 worked! Now back to the story.

“More than half of this issue was about your silly plans to get into the dance club.”

- NAYA

though this was Mavis's try out night. Mavis shrugged, smiled, and then stepped out onto the dance floor.

Mavis walked into the dance club, excited, nervous, and jumpy. She wasn't sure how the other club members would treat her, but Mavis hoped that she wouldn't be singled out as a target for mean teasing/bullying. Yes, Mavis, an adult cat, can get bullied. However, no bad things happened. The club just assumed that Mavis was one of their own, even Subscribe again for new cool topics!