

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

Harvey is going on Lunch's trampoline!

Before we cover the questioning of Sam, we thought that it might be best to take a little break. And, there is some big news. Harvey has decided to try and go on Lunch's trampoline again. This may not seem like big news from just that statement, but it is true that Harvey has not properly been on a trampoline for 7 years. Now, after all that time, Harvey wants to try again and test his balance. Harvey is also looking at some prosthetic legs, but will try going on a trampoline before buying anything.

Image above - Harvey, telling Coffee and North the good news through dreams.

---

Lunch and her kittens are super excited to have Harvey there, but Harvey says that he should be on the trampoline alone for 5 minutes with no one in range of jumping to, just in case that Harvey loses his balance. Also,

Harvey wants to practice on his own a bit. He has not done anything similar to going on a trampoline, but if this first session goes well, Harvey will be back. He also is thinking about going bungee jumping.

Now, Harvey has just arrived at Lunch and her kittens' house. Lunch's kittens have just run out to greet him, and Harvey is hugging them all. However, Harvey already had his eyes set on the trampoline and told Lunch's kittens to lead the way. Harvey walked to the trampoline, strapped on a bit of protective padding, and got in. Lunch's kittens backed up after Harvey asked them to, and Harvey took a tentative bounce. It was the first time that he had bounced on a trampoline in 7 years. Harvey jumped higher this time, and when he landed with perfect balance, Harvey started to cry again. He was so happy, that after 7 years, he could bounce again. Lunch's kittens cheered and jumped onto the trampoline with Harvey. After a 3, 2, 1 countdown, Harvey and Lunch's kittens bounced at the same time. The trampoline groaned, and for a second Harvey thought that his weight might bring it down. However, the trampoline threw Lunch's kittens and Harvey high into the sky. While Harvey only sailed 10 feet and landed back on the trampoline, Black, one of Lunch's kittens, soared higher than Lunch's two - story house and fell back to earth over the trampoline.

“That was so definitely completely absolutely awesome!”

- BLACK, WHO IS IN THE HOSPITAL

Harvey knew he shouldn't do it, but he shouted to Black, “when you reach the trampoline, bounce again!” Black nodded, and Harvey timed a bounce right so that he coordinated another bounce. Black shot even higher this time, to about 35 feet. Obsidian was filming, as they had sat out on this round of trampolining because of a broken rib. From trampolining. This video could go viral though, and Obsidian would have posted it right after Black fell to the mat, however, every cat for 100 miles must have heard the crack when Black landed on his right thin hind leg.

Subscribe again for more information on Sam!

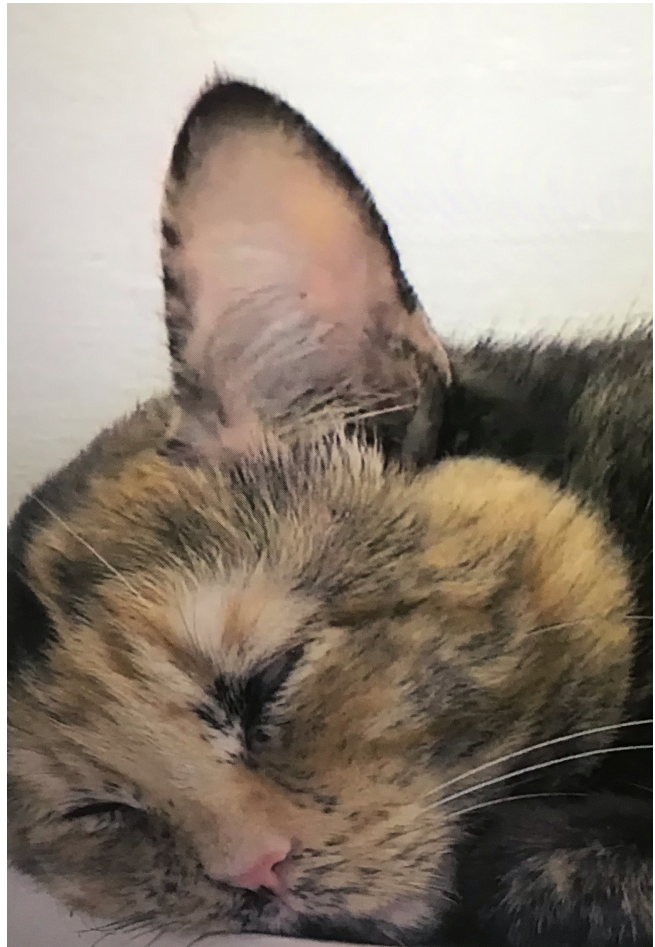

Image above - Judy, who wishes she could go on a trampoline right now.