

CATS ILLUSTRATED

Sam is being questioned by the police!

Yesterday, Sam was brought in and was placed in a holding cell. And now, Sam is being questioned. We are live from the police station.

"What is your name," the police chief asked Sam, even though it was obvious, "Sam," Sam replied, "and is that really necessary?" Judy sighed, as she was in the room too, along with the police chief and 2 police officers. "How old are you?" The police chief asked Sam, who told them, "I'm 3 years old, for your information. And is that a mandatory question? If not, I'd like to file a complaint about it to - well I guess you cops." The police chief sighed, as this questioning session was not making much progress. "Do you have a mate?" The police chief asked Sam, who shrugged. "I can't really remember.” One of the police officers in the questioning room actually groaned, and the police chief silenced them with a look.

Image above - Rudy, who hopes that Judy will get her questions answered.

Now, the police chief got to the main questioning. The part that you see in many TV series, such as Monk. “You have been brought in for assault and gun violence against Rudy and Judy White,” the police chief told Sam, “and right now, you could be facing a 3 year sentence.” Sam feigned a gasp, putting one of their front paws to their mouth, “how horrible!” Sam exclaimed, in pretend shock. Even the police chief rolled their eyes, and continued, “do have anything to say for yourself? Why you attacked Rudy and Judy White, that you aren’t guilty and that this is some mistake, or something along the lines of an apology?” Sam pretended to think very hard, “well, the first thing you suggested me say - why I attacked Rudy and Judy White, is between me and Judy. The second thing you suggested me say - that I’m not guilty and that this is some mistake, well, you wouldn’t believe me, would you? And the third thing that you suggested I say - “ Sam actually looked angry, “well, Rudy White, I am sorry that I attacked you in the park on that morning. You were simply in the way.” Even though Sam couldn’t see through the one way glass on the window of the questioning room, they seemed to catch Rudy’s eye.

Rudy turned away, disgusted at Sam’s “apology”.

“I have never ever questioned a more frustrating cat than Sam!”

- THE POLICE CHIEF, WHO KNOWS THAT THEY CAN SPEAK FOR THE WHOLE POLICE DEPARTMENT WITH THIS

“Well,” the police chief continued, annoyance showing in their voice, “would you like to tell Judy why you maliciously attacked her that morning in the park? I’m sure we’d all like to hear.” Sam pretended to think, “maybe I would, if you cops weren’t here in the room. And I am pretty sure that there are some cops behind the windows.” The police chief gave

Sam a look that expressed all of their frustration and anger, and Sam caved, “fine, fine. Everyone, sit down. Especially you Judy. This will be a long tale.”

Subscribe again for Sam’s tale!

Image above - Judy, who is making a point by pretending to sleep and snoring loudly while Sam drawled on about how Rudy was simply in the way.