

CATS ILLUSTRATED

Mavis and Naya are becoming friends!

Before we get back to the hard topic of Judy's depression, we have chosen to focus on something more interesting, such on the topic that Mavis and Naya are maybe starting to become friends. Mavis forgave Naya for all the times that she had broken in, and started treating her a bit better. Maybe that's because that Mavis bought a nice new safe to keep her wallet in, or maybe she was just feeling good hearted to the world. Naya forgave Mavis, for not really anything, because it was really a one way street when it came to doing things that needed forgiving. However, it's the thought that counts. And now, Mavis has brought Naya along whenever she goes on an errand with her kittens, because Naya is also spending more time around Mavis's house. If Naya is faking and doesn't really want to become friends, Mavis has basically thrown all of her valuables away.

Image above - Mavis, who's a bit gruff about it, but admits that she and Naya might be starting to become friends.

North, a multi species behaviorist, has some thoughts on this, "it is possible for a personality change like this to occur, but it is very rare that it happens this fast. Either Naya has been diagnosed with a special personality changing condition, or she's just faking." North's words have kind of freaked Mavis out, as she is one of many cats who believe in science. Mavis is now cramming valuable things such as vases, stray bills, and even kittens into strange but hidden places around the house. One of Mavis's kittens woke up in the laundry machine. Another was found when a kitten opened the dresser. A third kitten woke up shivering, and realized that all the food had been cleared out of the refrigerator to make room for them and a very large and cold vase. North has regretted his words, even though it wasn't really his fault.

Many cats agree that Mavis could use a mate, or just a cat who stays around the house. Mavis has refused to even look up a cat who would take care of her kittens if she went away, because she doesn't trust the expertise of the many cats on the internet who say that all kitten love them. Mavis would rather stay at home and take care of her kittens herself, even if that meant that she missed out on special nights with her sisters or just special events.

"I've never seen this side of Naya before - could somebody pinch me?"

- MAVIS

When Mavis did make it to the special farmer's market, she would get rid of nearly everything in the fridge to her kitten's dismay. However, the real wonder was that Naya had offered to babysit.

Subscribe again for more on Mavis and Naya's blooming friendship!

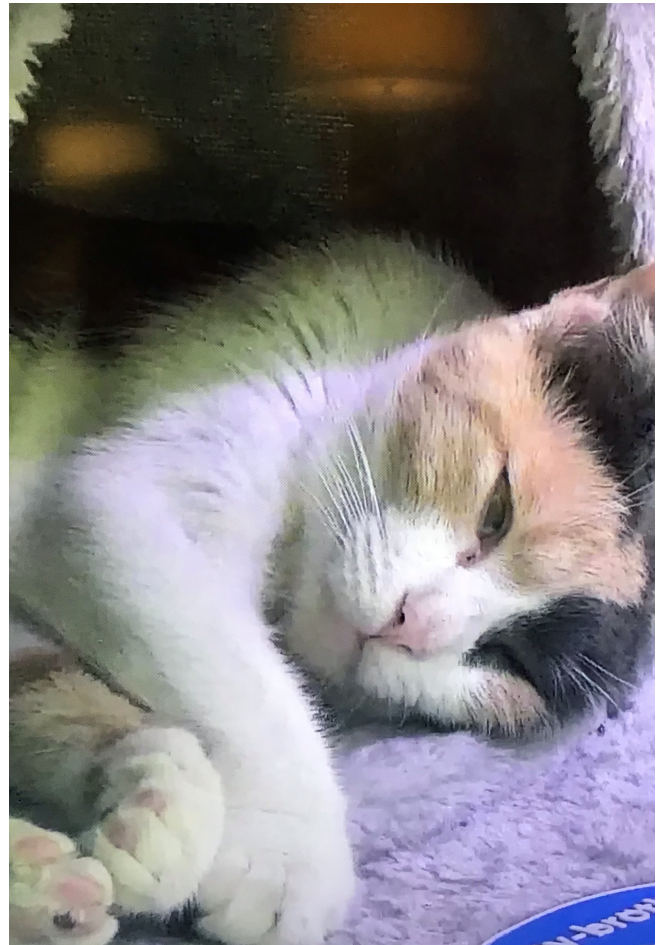

Image above - Juliet, who's thinking that Naya is faking, but probably isn't really thinking about it, as she is about 2/3rds asleep.