

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

Harvey has been caught smuggling drugs!

Last night, at around 3 o'clock, the police sent a SCAT team to a certain spot in the neighborhood, after an anonymous tip. At around 4, 2 cats were seen, meeting right near the spot that the SCAT team had been sent to. The cats exchanged a few words, and then one of them got a package out from their backpack. One cat only had 3 legs, the giver of the package. The other cat opened the package and took out bottles and bottles of drug - dosed water. Each cat looked at the other, seemingly confused, and then the SCAT team made their move.

Image above - Harvey, who's scooting back so that North doesn't see him at the police station.

One of the cats escaped in time, but the one with 3 legs couldn't run as fast. The SCAT team caught them, and realized that the cat that they had caught had 3 legs and was 8 years old. Not your average criminal. Harvey was brought back to the police station, where he will be questioned very shortly. As seen on the photo on the first page, Harvey was shrinking back in his holding cell so that North, who was called, did not see him as a prisoner.

In the evidence room at the police station, the police realized that the package was full of an illegal drug called Lirus. It was a very rare drug, and to find a whole package of Lirus dosed water, was like winning the jackpot at a casino. However, Lirus made up for its rarity with its intense addictive quality, and how dangerous it was. There had been a few rare cases in the past few years where cats suffered mightily after getting addicted to Lirus, and then running out. Lirus made the body feel light and warm, and actually tasted good. Lirus could actually let you run faster than usual, and many of the cats addicted to it were runners. You could literally jump higher, run faster, and leap farther when dosed with Lirus. However, it is horrible for cats, and if taken too often and dosed with too much, it can kill cats in hours. No cat knows why Harvey, the nicest cat around, would choose to smuggle an illegal drug like this. He must know how dangerous it is, but why?

Image above - Judy, who doesn't know who would believe that Harvey was illegally smuggling drugs.

---

“I think that we can believe Harvey's story, as I can imagine him giving to those in need.”

- JUDY

frame Harvey - he was so likable, and as addictive as Lirus when you got to know him.

In the questioning room, Harvey made a strange confession. He said that he felt so bad for some of the homeless cats living on the street, and he had wanted to deliver them a care package filled with fresh water, food, clothes, and even money. Harvey didn't know what was in that box, but it wasn't the one that he had intended to give. This has made the police scratch their heads in thought, as this means that someone wanted to frame Harvey for smuggling drugs. But who would want to Subscribe again for more on this mystery drug smuggler!