
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Who tried to frame Harvey?

When Harvey was caught at 4:00 in the morning before the hurricane, he was carrying a package of Lirus dosed water. Harvey swore that he had no idea how it had gotten there, and was trying to deliver a care package to some of the homeless cats on the street. The police do believe Harvey, and he has gone through 3 questioning and a polygraph test without lying or breaking down. North and Makenna support Harvey, because they know that Harvey wasn't quite sure of the meaning of "drugs" before this incident. However, Harvey has broken some rules when he left town in his camper to get away from the hurricane. The police weren't too happy about this, and some officers were sent to watch him. Harvey isn't much of a sight right now though, as he is pushing and pushing to no avail to get his camper out of the mud it is stuck in.

Image above - Harvey, who's wondering who might've tried to frame him for smuggling drugs.

However, as Harvey's situation is stable, some different things have happened. Lunch is running out of food, Rudy's car has broken down, and Judy, still trying to make a swimming pool, has filled her basement with 18 inches of water. Respectable, as she has a garden hose and a makeshift pipe system filling it. Soon, it will be more fun to swim in, and Judy and her kittens are looking forward to it. However, while Judy waits and waits to have her pool, the police have gotten a breakthrough on who might have tried to frame Harvey for smuggling Lirus.

After going through Harvey's phone records and searching through his therapy office, the police have a theory. One of Harvey's past therapy clients had been unhappy with his method of using the same shaping sand for every client. Harvey had calmly told the client that he couldn't buy new sand for each person, it would cost so much! Then, the client asked Harvey what he was paying for. Harvey said therapy, but the client shouted back torture as a response. Harvey had been shaken up, but when the client had a stress breakdown in the hospital, Harvey felt guilty that he hadn't tried harder to continue their therapy. The clients parents were very mad at Harvey and had even gone as far as to throw a rock through the window of Harvey's therapy office.

"I really hope that Judy can get through this hurricane - she's a great cat."

- MAVIS

Harvey is still yet to come. We personally fear for Judy, and the reporter we sent to her house.

Subscribe again for more on Judy's roof!

Image above - Rudy, who knows it isn't too bad right now, but when the hurricane is over, the fact that she doesn't have a working car will play a part.

Today, the police are launching a team to check out the house of the family of Harvey's former client. It will take a while, and we will be focusing on Hurricane Harvey for the next issue. Judy's pool is only 2 feet deep, but the water level is rising. It is already a lot more fun to be in. However, her roof has not been formally fixed up, and the worst of Hurricane