
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Rudy and Lunch's kittens' school trip is being postponed!

Because of Hurricane Harvey, transportation issues, and safety concerns, Lunch and Juliets' kittens' school trip will be postponed. Many kittens are disappointed about this, as this was probably the biggest field trip many of them had ever been on. Lunch and Juliet are also disappointed, as it would have been nice to have the house to themselves and their mates for just 1 night. I mean yeah, kittens are great, but sometimes they are insufferable.

Image above - Lunch and her kittens, who are really sad that the trip was postponed.

As Hurricane Harvey is starting to die down, though, parents have been asking some questions about whether the trip has been rescheduled or not. The trip had made all kittens in the class get excited, and now they were all feeling disappointed. Parent cats are concerned too, because they want their kittens to have some kind of overnight experience in the near future, as they are getting to the age where there are a lot more sleepovers, late parties, and other things that run past 9 P.M.

Many parent cats and kittens have signed a petition to reschedule the overnight trip to August 14. The petition was originally created by Lunch's kittens, who feel very proud of themselves for sparking a revolution. There are 251 signatures on the petition, and just today, the school board agreed to have the school trip rescheduled to August 14. Many kittens were satisfied with this news, as this trip was bound to be fun. However, there was a problem. So many parent cats were very happy to have their houses to themselves for one night, and didn't want to go chaperone on the field trip. However, if there were less than 5 chaperones, the trip had to be canceled.

This news freaked out many kittens, and went onto the bargaining table against their parents. Some kittens paid their parents outright to chaperone, and others made bets against their parents on rounds of Blackjack and poker. Some kittens bet their parents that they could drink a bottle of beer in 10 seconds, and if they won, their parent would chaperone, but that didn't work because the kittens didn't have any beer. Juliet's kittens went the farthest, tying Blackpelt up and turning him over an open fire. Juliet caved fast, hearing Blackpelt's moans.

In the end, 10 parents volunteered to be chaperones. All ten were accepted, as you could never have too many people watching kittens. However, everything had worked out quite nicely for everybody, except for Blackpelt, who had actually cooked a little bit over the fire. That wasn't too serious, luckily, he just had some charred fur and warm skin.

Subscribe again for the trip!

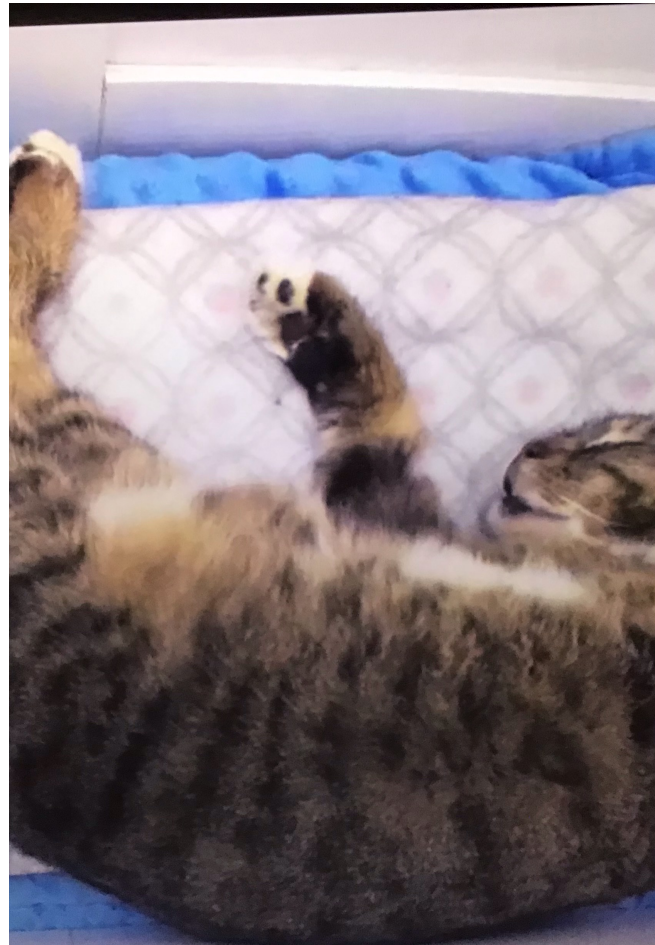

Image above - Harvey, who signed the petition from the police station.

“Sure, the trip will be fun, but is it wrong to be happy that they’re gone?”

- LUNCH