

CATS ILLUSTRATED

A cat was killed brutally in the street!

Last night, a cat called the police to report a brutal killing of a cat. This is not usually the kind of news that we like to report, but it was pretty important. The cat was run over and then stabbed and was left there in the street, dying. They were found about 5 minutes after the killing, and the first cat there witnessed the cat's dying words. "They came for me..." The police are perplexed with this case, but are determined to find the killer. The police have talked to the parents of the cat, and their siblings. None of them know what "they came for me..." meant, but it didn't sound good. The cat's body is currently in the forensics lab, and is about to go through an autopsy. Many cats feel horrible for the dead cat's parents and siblings, and have sent gifts along with cards.

The killing made the national news, as the dead cat turned out to be an amateur soccer player, who was playing for some national teams. They would have gone to the Catolympics this year, but their mate had just given birth and they didn't want to leave. The cat's mate was also demoralized, as she had wanted to raise their kittens together. Now the kittens had no father.

The police called some of the national teams that the cat had played for, and found out that they were a star player, a forward. They were the 5th all time leading goal scorer in the U.S., and had a net worth through the roof. The FBC (Federal Bureau of Catvestigations) has just been called in, because this is a very big case. This cat might have had grudges internationally, as they had been in the 2019 World Cup.

Well now, I suppose we have to tell you what happened at the 2019 World Cup. In the group stage, 2 teams, Russia and Malaysia, 2 very rivaled and very good teams, played against each other. The first half had no goals, but more than enough fouls and yellow cards. However, in the second half, Russia scored in the 62nd minute, after a Malaysia corner gone wrong. However, the goalie on the Russian team had committed a foul in the box in order to punch the ball to their teammate, and the goal was overturned and Malaysia was awarded a penalty. However, before they could take it, one of the Russian players kicked the referee in frustration.

“Some cats called that match the most brutal in soccer history!”

- HARVEY, WHO ALSO BELIEVES THAT THIS WAS THE MOST BRUTAL MATCH IN SOCCER HISTORY

That was not the right thing to do, as that cat was already on a yellow card. They got a red card and were sent out of the game, but that sparked more kicks. The Malaysian team tried to intercept the Russian team, but it just turned into a brawl. There were 5 more red cards, and the end result was that Russia didn't have enough players to play, giving Malaysia an automatic win. They met again in the semifinal however.
