
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Mavis is going to compete soon!

As the murder investigation continues, the Catolympics continue, Lunch's condition does not get any better, and Rudy and Lunch's kittens go on their school trip, Mavis is so close to competing. Well, it's technically 2 A.M. her time right now, so she's fast asleep, but this is the day. However, the only trouble is that Japan is 16 hours ahead, so when she competes at 5 P.M., it'll be 1 A.M. our time. Parent cats normally stay up that long, but for kittens, Rudy had devised a plan. When the kittens were on their school trip (they still are, and are just starting the second day), they probably goofed off until around 11 or 12 at night. So, they will already be super tired. To make sure that they can still watch Mavis competing however, Rudy will make her kittens go to bed around 6 P.M. and then wake them up at 12:30. They will get a very solid nap, and will feel good enough to eat some snacks and watch Mavis compete.

Image above - Judy, who really wants Mavis to win a medal.

As Mavis sleeps and sleeps and cats prepare to watch her, our reporter that snuck onto Lunch and Rudys' kittens school trip has fed us some valuable information. On the first day, the kittens had the time of their lives. Some went into some shallow water, while others worked on a huge sandcastle. When bully cats came to knock it over, the kittens defended their fortress. It was quite large, and our reporter was wondering if there was even that much sand on the beach. Now, on the second day, the kittens have persuaded their teacher to pick them up a junky breakfast. Or maybe that was our reporter, bribing the teacher. That is all for now, but this second day is bound to have more in it.

While some cats will view Mavis on a big screen in the school gymnasium, Naya is offering to let cats come to her place. She as an 82 inch TV (stolen or payed for with stolen money), and is offering free snacks. She says that up to 10 cats can come, but they all have to pay. Also, kittens have to pay more. Many cats are confused by that, until Naya explained the fact that kittens eat more snacks.

Image above - Juliet, who's thinking that she's just gonna stay at her place to watch Mavis compete.

"I see a sign on Naya's door that says 'kittens cost $5 more.' What!?"

- JUDY, WHO WANTED TO BRING HER 7 KITTENS

More cats are just choosing to stay at their own house. There was a sudden spike in the buying of TVs, as many cats wanted to see Mavis with as much detail as possible. All I can say is, well, it's a good week for TV dealers. Also, Lunch was moved into a room with a TV, so that she can watch. Jake and her kittens will be joining her, to watch Mavis compete and to bring Lunch's favorite snacks. It's a special occasion, so a short visit can be tolerated by the hospital staff. However, Lunch's kittens will need a good nap before watching because our reporter told us they stayed up past midnight.

Subscribe again for Mavis to compete!