
CATS ILLUSTRATED

North spends a lot of money on the lottery!

When Lunch won the lottery a while back, North got inspired and has been playing the lottery for a few months now. He hasn't come close to winning anything, but has spent 10 dollars a week on the lottery. This adds up fast, and Harvey calculated that he could buy 4 jumbo bags of snacks for what North spent on the lottery. North himself doesn't want to spend that much on the lottery, but feels like he has to.

Image above - North, who's talking with Harvey about his bad spending habit.

North has started therapy sessions with Harvey, to talk about how he might spend his money elsewhere. It is helping, and this week, North only spent 5 dollars on the lottery. Harvey plans to bring the number down even more, so that if North wants to play the lottery, he'll only feel the need to spend one to two dollars. Harvey also wants North to use the money saved to buy snacks. North didn't agree to this, though.

While North works out how to stop spending lots on the lottery, Judy plans revenge on Rudy. They have been fighting for a little while now, and this bout has been particularly nasty. Rudy was still getting apology notes from the police officers that had falsely arrested her, and both of Judy's bathrooms still smelled a bit like manure. Rudy had been the last one to act, and was now waiting for retaliation from Judy, which would come.

Another topic that has come up is that there was a protest to lift the city - wide alcohol ban. However, kittens were still trying to drink more beer (Juliet's kittens especially, because they had already felt the wonderful feeling of being drunk), so the police had decided to give the ban another week or two. This is making some cats very mad, while other cats wouldn't mind seeing the ban go on another month.

Some cats are wondering why there has been a stretch of good things happening. Don't ask us - we just report the news. However, we hate to burst the bubbles of those cats, but something less than good has arisen. Mavis was out for a morning jog today, when she was mugged - or was nearly mugged. The cat came out of nowhere, holding a knife. "Gimme your wallet!" They said. Mavis stood, looking quizzically at the cat. "Why?" She told them, voice sounding completely confused. "Ask the knife," the cat responded in a threatening voice. "Okay," Mavis told them, grabbing the knife out of the cat's and and asking it, "why?" She looked up to show the cat that she had done that, to find them gone. They had seemingly disappeared. This isn't too odd, but there are reports of the same cat doing the same thing at 4 different places - somehow, all at the exact same time.

"Mama beat a mugger!"

- MAVIS'S KITTENS, WHO WILL BE BRAGGING AT SCHOOL ABOUT THIS INCIDENT

Subscribe again for more on this mugger cat!

Image above - Juliet, who knows, ban or no ban, she won't ever be able to keep alcohol in her house again.