

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

The tryout results were officially declared!

Just a little earlier today, the video game competition tryout results were officially declared. Some cats were pumped up, but others were sad that they had not moved on to the next round. Most of the cats in group three were angry and Jake and his kittens, because some of the underdog teams had actually been the last to be defeated. The good teams in that group had been defeated first. The slo - mo replay of that scene had to be watched over and over again, until that the judges were sure that the teams were defeated in some order.

Image above - Juliet, who's relieved that she, Blackpelt, and their kittens made it through to the next round of the video game competition.

---

In celebration, Stripy's team went out to get takeout from The Wish for Fish. As usual, the kittens ordered beer battered fish, and Harvey asked whether the restaurant had any sugar that could be used as a topping. But it was a celebratory meal, and all seven cats eating were in very high spirits. However, there was also a team that was in very low spirits. Judy and her kittens, even though they got a respectable third place finish in their group, feel grumpy as of the fact that Rudy and her kittens got a second place finish in theirs. Judy was grumbling about how Rudy didn't deserve second place, while Rudy was frolicking in a water park she had taken her kittens out to. She felt like doing something crazy, as of the fact that she and her kittens were through to the next stage in the video game competition. Even so, her kittens got tired of getting wet and made Rudy leave so that they could go to a place and get dry.

Juliet and her kittens were feeling satisfied with their performance, just annoyed at the plague that had swept through their game. They were lucky to finish fourth, as other teams had more medicine - they just didn't conserve it. And, they had Blackpelt who had taken some training in identifying medicinal plants. That had helped a bit, giving Juliet, Blackpelt, and their kittens a good enough fourth place finish.

The final round of this competition is not scheduled until September 5, so cats will have to wait a bit until they can play again. However, each team who advanced to the final round will be receiving a version of the game that is more difficult than the first practice version all cats got. Judy and her kittens got theirs, and they told Max that they would be practicing. Max made dinner, while Judy and her kittens gamed the evening away. They took 6 hours to complete it, and were absolutely exhausted by the end. And hungry. Max had thought that there would be leftovers, but there were just hungry kittens asking for more even though the soup pot was empty.

Subscribe again for the main event!

Image above - Judy, who is going to sabotage Rudy in the final round of the video game competition.

“I’d say we went quite fast in that game - that could have been eight hours!”

- ICE, ONE OF JUDY’S KITTENS