

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

Harvey is feeling sick from too much sugar!

After having his daily tablespoon of sugar before bed, Harvey woke up in the middle of the night, moaning. His belly was roiling, and it was for sure from too much sugar consumed.

Now cats are wondering, well, why did this happen? For normal cats this would be a regular reaction, but Harvey hasn't felt sugar sick since he graduated middle school! Harvey feels that his stomach has betrayed him, and is very miserable right now. Harvey's belly is roiling, and has not been able to keep anything down for the past eight hours.

In this situation, Makenna would usually give a patient alcohol to calm

Image above - Harvey, who doesn't feel so good.

---

them. A sip would be enough to relax a cat, but not upset their stomach too much. However, because of the city - wide alcohol ban, no cat has been able to get any alcohol without being on the wrong side of the law. But right now, Makenna has no idea what to do with Harvey - he wants sugar, sugar fries, or honey chicken from Lunch's Luncheon, but in the end Makenna got him takeout from The Wish for Fish. Beer battered fish was temporarily off the menu, as even The Wish for Fish couldn't get any beer because of the ban.

As Harvey faces sugar inflicted stomach problems, alcohol ban riots have not gotten any better. Even some of the more richer and powerful cats were on the edge of their cliffs. One had even hired a gang to steal a 2011 Pinot noir from a local winery. Things were getting out of hand, and the authorities are not at all sure what to do. Liquor shops are getting annoyed as they cannot make any money during the ban, and the police are facing a tough decision of removing the ban and risking a kitten uprising for alcohol, or keeping the ban in place and having a liquor shop uprising to sell alcohol.

Image above - Harvey, who's belly still doesn't feel so good from sugar.

“Hmm. Maybe alcohol would be good with a tablespoon of sugar...”

- HARVEY, WHO'S CROSSED A LINE NOW

Harvey is still very perplexed about why his stomach feels bad from sugar. However, Makenna might have discovered the cause, when she found the sugar packet from the sugar Harvey had eaten. Sugar lasts a while, but this one expired a few years ago. Makenna went through Harvey's sugar packets, and rooted out all of the old ones to Harvey's dismay. Harvey was sad that he lost precious sugar, but was happy that now he knew that his body could still tolerate sugar, just not spoiling sugar. He ordered a large side of sugar fries from Lunch's Luncheon, and picked them up just now. While some cats are happy to know what caused Harvey's upset stomach, others wish Harvey had taken a break from sugar.

Subscribe again for more on sugar!