
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Reposado and Reposado II have developed a feud!

Last night, there were mistakes made, bad things said, and a bit of physical violence at Harvey's house. It started with Reposado II accidentally knocking over one of Reposado's paints and spilling it on one of Reposado's paintings. Reposado was already on edge, and snapped at Reposado II. Reposado II snorted and stomped on another of Reposado's paintings, and Reposado then threw a paint can at Reposado II's head. Reposado II knocked over a bunch of canvases and poured paint over them, and that was the final straw.

"You'll always be the weird, no good unnoticed cat," Reposado shouted, "you don't deserve my name." Reposado II's head snapped up, "I don't have to listen to this, I have to report a case of fleas, lice and worms. Oh, who could have that. Maybe the dirtiest, smelliest and most careless cat here. Reposado? A name come to mind?"

Image above - Harvey, who was thinking about trying to separate Reposado and Reposado II but in the end was too scared to intervene.

We're not going to continue right from there as of some very bad things that happened right after Reposado II's last remark. However, now they are just sulking in different parts of Harvey's house. Even though this isn't technically Reposado II's house, no one would could even think about asking them to leave. Not right now. However, North has called Stripy and has asked her to come over - Stripy, being a peacemaker, should be able to help with Reposado and Reposado II's feud.

Both Rudy and Judy have opinions on this. First of all, they think (yes, they agree on this) that Reposado and Reposado II are copycats and they just want attention. They also thought that we might think that they're story is getting old, and that we are bringing in a new, younger feud to replace them. That is definitely not true. We wouldn't want to stop covering their feud, and even if it petered out we or Naya would probably spark it back up again. I guess we could pay Naya to spark Rudy and Judy's feud back up if it ever came to a stop, but then again, Naya would probably just do it on her own on a boring Saturday afternoon.

"I know how Stripy feels sometimes - I've seen untreatable therapy patients before."

- HARVEY

and Judy are long past the peacemaking point, and Stripy doesn't want that to happen to Reposado and Reposado II.

Subscribe again for more fights!

Image above - Lunch, who's happy she doesn't have a feud with anyone.

Reposado and Reposado II have not been able to see each other for the past 6 hours, and both have seen attempts to calm them down from Harvey, North, and Stripy. None of these have worked, and Stripy has been thinking about quitting her job. North asked why, and Stripy is just getting frustrated with having feuds that she can't control. Rudy