
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Rudy and Judy are eating pancakes competitively!

In recent times, Rudy and Judy have both become very interested in competitive eating. Rudy won a silver ribbon at the county fair for coming in third in hot dog eating, and Judy has placed second in a local competition. However, there is a big pancake eating competition coming up, and a lot of cats are worried about what might happen to Rudy and Judy's stomachs if they are eating against each other. However, no matter how any cat tries, they are not able to change Rudy and Judy's minds about competing against each other.

Image above - Harvey, who knows that if Rudy and Judy eat against each other, it will do nothing good for their stomachs.

There is still some time before the competition, and Rudy and Judy have been ordering the breakfast special at Lunch's Luncheon every day for a while. The breakfast special is a new addition to the menu at Lunch's Luncheon, and it is meant for a family. However, it is a perfect warmup for competitive eating. The breakfast special has fresh and non powdered eggs, fresh potato hash browns, soft bread, and then a stack of 8 pancakes. It has become a staple for a lot of birthday breakfasts, and Lunch often sees kittens there in the morning with their families on their birthday.

Most cats think that competitive eating is one of the worst things you can do. Why stuff yourself when you may not be hungry? Why risk throwing it all up afterwards? Food is meant to be enjoyed, not scarfed down so fast you can't taste it. Many cats are opposed to competitive eating, and and not happy with Rudy and Judy. Lunch especially, because the breakfast special is for families, not cats doing a competitive eating competition. Just today, Lunch banned Rudy and Judy from ordering the breakfast special all by themselves. There were other, hungrier cats it should go to.

Image above - Lunch, who will be giving the food Rudy and Judy would have eaten to some homeless cats.

“You don’t want to end up like Harvey, do you?”

- MAKENNA, A DIETARY SCIENTIST, TALKING TO RUDY AND JUDY

The competition is still a good week away, but it has been obvious that Rudy and Judy are putting on a bit of weight from eating super big meals. They are eating in the time that they would be outside, harassing each other, and that is not doing good for either of them. Rudy is getting a bit lethargic, and Judy didn't leave her place in front of her video game console for a good five hours yesterday.

We are praying that Rudy and Judy do not upset their stomachs too much in the competition, because then again, no one wants to see what is inside Rudy and Judys' stomachs.

Subscribe again for more on this competition!