Stripy is thinking about starting a casserole business!

As she is getting bored with her job as a peacemaker, Stripy is planning to take on selling casseroles as a part time job. She will still work as a peacemaker, but she won't be at the phone all day waiting for a call - she'll be making casseroles.

Many cats know that they would love to buy casseroles made by Stripy, and are encouraging her to start that business. Stripy actually asked Naya if she wanted to help out with the business, as Naya also enjoys casserole making, and Naya agreed after promising that she wouldn't steal any ingredients or casseroles. Naya does really love casseroles, and she seemed genuine enough to Stripy. Also, Mavis is already asking to buy a cabbage casserole, as it is her second favorite food, to cabbage.

North and Harvey have just arrived in Egypt, and they sent us a photo of them getting off the plane. Many cats are interested in what Egypt looks like, and North's photo, which he posted on Catstagram of course, became very popular with many cats. We have a feeling that North's account of the trip, with our contribution of course, will be very popular and will help us surge over The Facts.

Meanwhile, Stripy has set up a small stand on the corner near her house, and posted a video on catTube about how she was selling casseroles, frozen and delivered, or fresh out on the street. Immediately, Stripy was swamped with orders, and couldn't make casseroles fast enough even with the help of Naya and their workforce of nine kittens. We placed an order for a frozen casserole too, but we doubt it will arrive in the next month. However, while we were waiting for our casserole, something kind of big has gone down.

If you remember from a previous issue that we were going to bribe Lunch's kittens to make The Facts look bad? Well they found a drunk member hanging out near a bar, and started tossing pebbles at them, and making rude hand gestures at the cat. Eventually, the drunk member of The Facts lost it and kicked one of Lunch's kittens very hard. One of Lunch's kittens had filmed the whole thing, and the others helped their sibling get away. They were clutching their ribs, as if they might be broken.

Image above - Judy, who ordered three casseroles very early so Rudy's order would take longer to come.

“If it was one of my kittens who was kicked, I would have revenge.”

- NAYA, WHO IS VERY PROTECTIVE OF HER KITTENS

When Lunch's kittens told Lunch what happened, Lunch went berserk. The video was posted on lots of social media platforms, and The Facts were sent horrible messages and threats from kitten loving cats. Lunch is in The Facts's headquarters with Jake yelling at the manager, telling them that she would get them shut down for their treatment of her kittens, and that their employee would have to pay the hospital bill and then they would go to court. In fact, Lunch has already showed the video to her lawyer, who thought what happened was horrible, and called for a trial right away. The employee of The Facts is facing some kitten abuse charges, and Lunch's kittens are a bit traumatized by what happened, even though it was all part of the plan that we paid them to do. However, we snuck each kitten an extra twenty dollars to make sure they kept their mouths shut.
