CATS ILLUSTRATED

The Facts have lost lots of popularity!

Since the video of one of The Facts’s employee’s kicking one of Lunch’s kittens has circulated, The Facts’s popularity has dropped by a lot. Now, cats are turning to us, as we are the only other news source in Pawsville. However, some cats are wondering what will happen to The Facts. If they open again in a different city, cats may recognize them from the mention in the video, as it has about five million views on each social media platform. We are hoping that they just leave Pawsville, and after that, we would be the only news organization here.

While The Facts are struggling, we have gotten a call from North three days into his trip. Here is some of what he is explaining to us so far: "It's really nice here in Egypt, and I've met so many new friends! The food is wonderful and I've loved touring the landmarks in my free time! And Harvey is happy too! He found a brand of custom sugar cubes, and has been buying them in bulk! He has also tried at least a dozen restaurants so far." North seems to be having fun, and that is good, as this seems like the kind of story that might get us popularity.

We are also filming kittens right now, as Juliet's kittens have set up a kind of Olympic Games. Kittens from all around have come to participate, in the different sports, which consist of ten meter dashes, push up endurance tests, and the very fun sport of mountain biking. Juliet has some old bikes just sitting around, and they are perfect for three kittens to cruise around a rocky hill and up a ramp. If parent cats see that, though, these "Olympic Games" will be shut down very fast due to safety concerns. But for now, kittens are having the times of their lives riding ramps at high speeds, and crash landing into a lake.

There is a good thing happening, though, that may spark the attention of many cats, kittens especially. A competition is coming up, but not a video game competition, not an eating competition, a sports competition. And not just any sport, this competition is for the fine sport of... acrobatics! Cats have heard about this, and even kittens are thinking about doing an act. In fact, Lunch's kittens grouped some other kittens and made a ten kitten pyramid that other kittens stood and performed tricks on. We are sure many cats are worried about kittens doing acrobatics, but these are special circumstances. Even we are thinking about trapezes and tightropes right now.
