
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Mavis has a sore throat!

Recently, Mavis has gotten a very bad sore throat. No cat knows why this has happened, but Mavis is not feeling very good at all. She has been resting in her bed, eating cough drops and drinking lots of water. A doctor will be checking her over in a little bit.

Image above - Lunch, who dropped off some honey chicken for Mavis.

Lunch knows how bad a sore throat can be, so she dropped off some honey chicken for Mavis, which tastes good and will soothe her throat. Harvey has made a sugar cube drink for Mavis, but she has not chosen to drink it as the little bits of sugar hurt her throat. Stripy has made Mavis a soft casserole, and it seems that cats are ready to take care of Mavis when she is not feeling well. Mavis's kittens are by their mama's side, and are reading Mavis stories and telling her jokes.

However, as Mavis is using cough drops, one of her kittens decided to try one, and discovered something amazing. They raided Mavis's stash, and then sold cough drops to other kittens for a quarter a cough drop. Cough drops are pretty much harmless, but they do contain a sizable amount of sugar and seem like candy to most kittens. Harvey has discovered cough drops too, but Makenna threatened to burn his sugar cubes if Harvey bought and ate any cough drops unless he actually had a sore throat. Harvey then faked a sore throat, and Makenna told him that he couldn't buy cough drops at all.

Cough drops are a new addition for cats, and were discovered by some cat about five years back. They are gaining popularity, and are now a staple for sore throats and coughs. In fact, some kittens a few towns over set up a stand on the street for cough drops and were sold out by the end of the afternoon - you could make serious money by buying cough drops in bulk and then selling them for a bit more than what you bought them for.

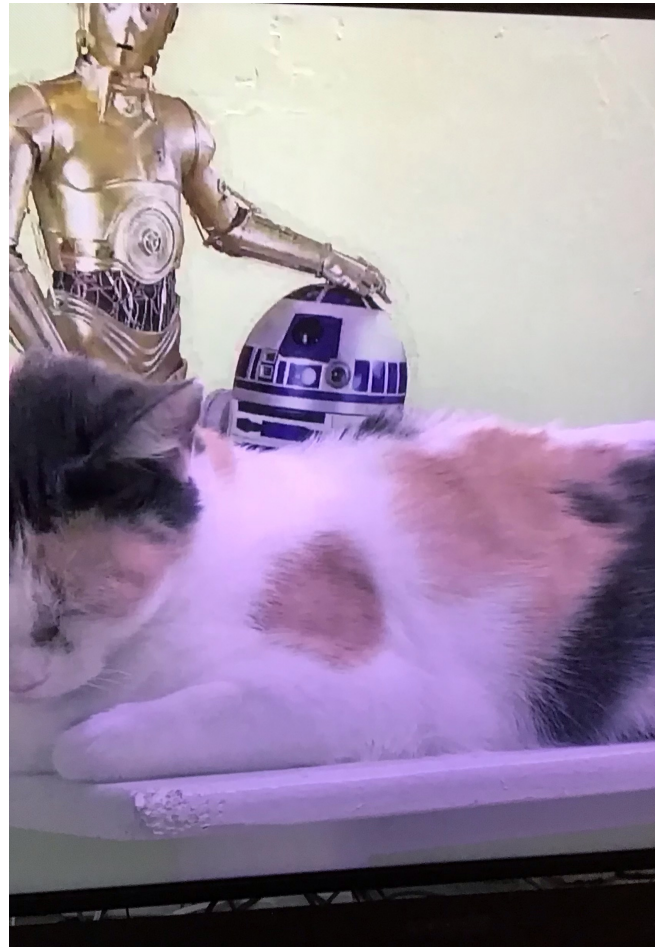

Image above - Rudy, who's going to sell cough drops to all cats in need except for Judy.

“Subscribe again for more on cough drops? What does that even mean?”

- NAYA

While cats have been obsessing over cough drops, The Food Mood has been just as popular. They may be the most powerful business in Pawsville, and plan on expanding. Lunch's Luncheon has gotten a bit more business though, as some cats have gotten tired of stuffing themselves at The Food Mood, and are ready to go back to a different restaurant. Lunch's Luncheon has been going through some development, and will soon be opening up a patio with open air seating. This will probably be popular, and we think that many cats will enjoy this new addition to Lunch's Luncheon.

Subscribe again for more on cough drops!