

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

Mavis has a bad cold!

As she has been tirelessly shoveling snow for the past few days, Mavis has caught a bad cold. She has a small fever, a very runny nose, a bad headache, and a slight cough. This is nearly as bad as a cold can get, and Mavis is not feeling very well at all.

Image above - Mavis, trying to rest.

---

Mavis has been resting in her bed since yesterday, with boxes of tissues clustered around her. Her kittens brought her some takeout chicken soup from Lunch's Luncheon, which seemed to help a little. Mavis was also entertained by playing video games, and watching her kittens play video games. However, Mavis and her kittens were not doing well on their own.

Mavis's kittens called Naya's kittens to say that help was needed over at Mavis's house. Naya's kittens rushed over, and soon, kittens were serving Mavis left and right. Mavis had a chubby foreleg massage, a cool cloth on her forehead, and super soft tissues.

This cold incident has proven that Mavis could use some extra help every now and then, because she is the lone parent. So, Mavis has hired a kittensitter to watch her kittens if she needs to go somewhere or is sick. But her kittens weren't happy about that. In just a few moments, the cool cloth was removed from Mavis's forehead, the soft tissues were replaced with toilet paper, and there was no kitten ready to give a massage. Mavis was left alone in her room. However, the kittensitter had already been hired, and just now, they have arrived at Mavis's house.

The kittensitter knew not to disturb Mavis, because she is resting, and is going to try to keep the kittens pretty quiet. However, that wasn't going to be easy. At the first roll call, there were only five kittens, until the last one tumbled out of a cupboard, half submerged in a bag of chips. And that gives a kittensitter the impression that they will be in for a long job.

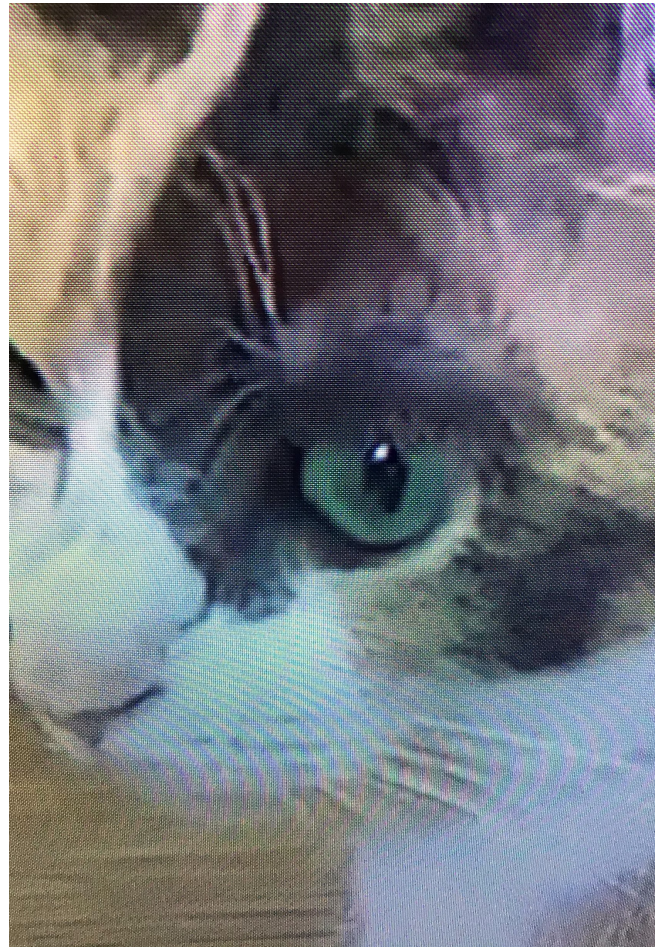

Image above - Juliet, who feels very bad for the kittensitter.

“I’d like to be a kittensitter — so easy to steal things!”

- NAYA

In the end, the kittensitter locked Mavis's kittens in their room and took a nap. However, the kittensitter forgot to lock the window, and Mavis's kittens took the two-hour opportunity to buy some junk food and then came back to play video games in their room. However, Mavis slept through all of it, and when she woke up, refreshed, she paid the kittensitter in full with a large tip. But Mavis, even feeling sick, could probably suspect that something was up, maybe from the fry under the couch, or the video game controllers sitting out, but if anything, it was probably the fact that the kittensitter couldn't get out of the house fast enough.

Subscribe again for more on kittensitters!