

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

Pawsville is getting hail!

As the temperature in Pawsville is cold but not quite freezing, cats have been seeing a bit of hail in the past few days. The hail is small, about the size of a gum ball, but it has been causing some problems. A cat was hit on the side of the head yesterday, and they were knocked unconscious. Luckily there was a cat nearby to help get the first cat inside. However, the upcoming weather suggests that there might be more hail in the near future.

Image above - Harvey, who hasn't seen much hail in Pawsville in the past years.

---

Cats have been reinforcing their umbrellas with metal, and are ready for any hail in the near future. However, hail has been damaging the roofs of buildings, and Lunch's Luncheon has a small leak on one side of the roof.

But some cats have been leaving out buckets to collect the hail, especially Rudy and Judy, as a ball of ice is a very dangerous projectile, and the more dangerous an object can be, the more Rudy and Judy want it.

Harvey has put up some plates of metal on his roof, so that any hail just rolls off. Unfortunately, whenever hail lands on the metal, it bangs very loudly. And that makes it very hard for Harvey or any other cat in his house to sleep at night. But it does work, and Harvey has not had any dents in his roof since he put up the plates of metal. However, the constant banging makes visiting cats cringe, and North stays in his soundproof study all day, even for meals.

In upcoming days, the temperature is staying in the high thirties, and that is the perfect temperature for yet more hail. Kittens are hoping that the temperature drops ten degrees so that Pawsville can get some snow. All of the snow was washed away by rain and the temperature is too warm to get more snow. Right now, kittens are just playing video games inside to pass the time, as most parent cats don't want their kittens playing outside while it is hailing. However, some cars have been affected by the hail. Judy heard a clunk earlier today and looked out her window to see a big dent in the front of her car. Luckily, most cats have garages and are moving their cars inside.

Image above - Juliet, resting after being hit in the back by a small hailstone.

“My tricycle got banged up after being hit by a hailstone!”

- MAVIS, ANGUISHED

The hail and sleet is terrible weather, and cats are getting cabin fever from being cooped up inside for so long. Kittens can't focus on school, because they know that the winter holidays are so near and winter break is fast approaching. However, Pawsville may be in for a brown and wet Christmas. And that would not be very fun, because some kittens want new sleds for Christmas, and what good is a new sled if you can't use it the day you get it? Kittens are not happy with this lack of snow.

Subscribe again for more on hail!