
CATS ILLUSTRATED

The grocery store has been ransacked!

In a heist last night, an unknown cat came into the grocery store and started messing around, knocking over shelves and occasionally putting food items in a garbage bag. The end result was devastating, and grocery store workers along with volunteers are working hard to clean up the grocery store. However, the mysterious cat has not been found yet, and the police are looking carefully at the security footage from the grocery store to determine more details about this cat.

Image above - Lunch, who wants to know who ransacked the grocery store.

Lunch is not happy that a cat ransacked the grocery store because her Luncheon buys food there and they might have to delay buying a load of food until the situation is worked out. However, Lunch is also scared that the cat might strike again at her Luncheon, because Lunch's Luncheon's store room is pretty full of food right now. Other grocery stores and convenience stores are also worried for the same reason as Lunch, and no business wants to be ransacked.

The grocery store footage has shown that the cat was wearing a trench coat, disguising gender and fur color. This will make it very hard for the police to find this cat, but now they know that they probably aren't dealing with a petty criminal. So that crossed Naya off of the list, because she liked to make a big deal over a small crime. This was a bigger crime, and Naya is a thief, but she isn't a downright criminal. And that left about zero cats who could have ransacked the grocery store, because Pawsville is a pretty crime-less town.

Right now, the only clue the police have is the trench coat that the cat was wearing. Not many cats in Pawsville own a trench coat, so it should be easy to track down the mystery cat who ransacked the grocery store. However, there was a big trash burning last night, so the trench coat could be gone, leaving the police with zero material evidence to track down the grocery store ransacker.

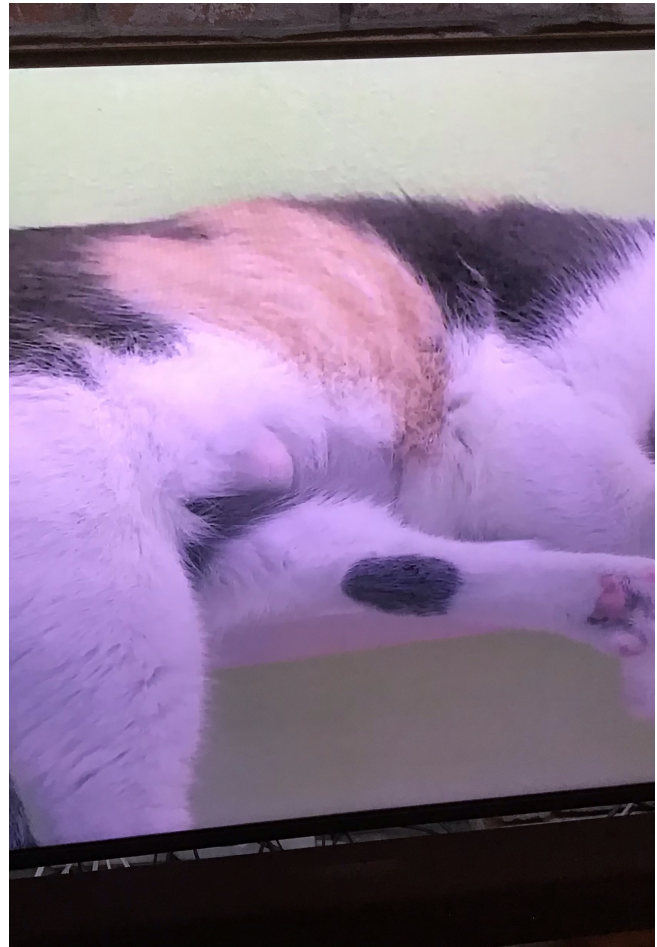

Image above - Juliet, who's wondering when ice cream will be back in stock at the grocery store.

“I might’ve knocked down a shelf, but I wouldn’t ransack the whole grocery store.”

- NAYA

The police are at an impasse right now, so they will be pausing this case until more evidence emerges. The grocery store cleanup is going well for now, and the grocery store has hired a security force to patrol the area at all times. The police have also slightly lengthened the sentence that comes with a crime like this, to discourage this cat from any more ransacking. However, if this is a smart criminal, they would know how to do these heists without getting caught. And that is the fact that worries police and other cats the most.

Subscribe again for more evidence!