
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Today is Christmas!

Today is one of the most fun days of the year, because today is Christmas. Cats are celebrating, opening gifts, and spending time with family. However, not all cats are happy. Harvey is angry with us, because of a mistake we made a few days ago. We forgot to cover Harvey's birthday, December twenty-two. We know we made a mistake, and we paid Harvey back with a large order of sugar cubes. It seems to have calmed him down a little, but Harvey still isn't very happy.

Image above - Harvey, North, and Coffee spending Christmas together.

On Christmas, the main thought in kittens' minds is gifts. Most kittens open presents early on Christmas day, and they have gotten most of the items on their lists. New sleds, toys, books, video games, and the occasional pair of socks are littering kittens' rooms, and adult cats are enjoying lots of gift cards and Christmas mugs. However, some adult cats are feeling a bit resentful toward their kittens after receiving gifts along the lines of used pens and gift cards with less than a dollar left.

Pawsville did get a white Christmas, and that made a lot of cats happy. Kittens are using their new sleds, and Rudy and Judy are out in the snow comparing gifts from their kittens. Rudy feels that she has the upper hand with her new snowball maker and launcher, and Judy is feeling a bit jealous as she just recieved a bouncy ball from all seven of her kittens in a combined gift. Rudy was lucky to be one of the only adult cats to receive a good gift from their kittens, and Judy has been feeling very jealous and resentful.

Harvey has had a good birthday and Christmas, but he is feeling a bit shorted as of the fact that most of his presents are joint gifts for Christmas and his birthday. Harvey had a sugar eating contest three days ago, which Harvey won of course. However, North did put up a good fight, but he ate way too much sugar way too fast and the contest ended up in North throwing up. However, it was Harvey's birthday, so North didn't take the time to clean up the throw-up.

“I got two gifts from my kittens — a stolen wallet and a stolen bracelet!”

- NAYA

cover those events when they happen for real. And we will surely be looking forward to that.

Subscribe again for more on the new year!

Image above - Lunch, who got some nice gifts for Christmas.

Cats are having a good Christmas, and they are spending time with family and are also enjoying their gifts. This Christmas was very fun for many cats, with gifts and candy canes galore. However, now cats are looking forward to the next big event, the new year. And a little after that, there is a very special anniversary for a very special news organization. But we'll