Rudy and Judy are still fighting!

As cats are competing to get a spot in Harvey's camping trip, the tension has sparked Rudy and Judy to fight again. Today, Judy had a very suspicious bruise on her side, and Rudy was definitely limping.

Harvey still has not decided which cats would get to come on his camping trip. But he is looking for some deciding factors. Rudy is not on his doorstep for half the day pleading and begging for him to let her come, which has pushed the odds in her favor. However, letting Stripy and her kittens come is also tempting, because they are a group of four and Stripy would throw a few casseroles into the deal to make sure Harvey didn't change his mind. However, Harvey does like the idea of having free sugar fries for life—Lunch’s agreement—and he is still having a hard time deciding on who to take.

Both Rudy and Judy have put this camping trip out of their minds, as they need to focus on beating the other in rounds of fighting. The temperature is cold, cold enough to freeze water, but Rudy and Judy go out without any jackets on. That makes it really unbearable when you land in a snow drift. However, both Rudy and Judy are banged up already. When Rudy fell in a large snow drift and was chilled to the bone, she went into her house to refuel and get warm. But Judy was outside her house the whole time taunting Rudy about how she had fled and telling her that she was a coward for not fighting it out. However, Rudy retaliated by throwing a ball of clay out the window that hit Judy smack in the face. That clay had been for one of Rudy’s kittens’ homework assignments, but Rudy didn’t care.

Cats are too busy trying to convince Harvey to let them come camping that no one is even watching Rudy and Judy fight. Naya is at Harvey’s door holding money from the bank and telling him that she could get more for him if she can come camping. Mavis has shined up her Olympic Gold Medal, and she has been telling Harvey that it can be his, for the small price of letting her come camping. Mavis has even raised the prospect of her going alone, throwing her kittens under the bus.

wouldn’t have anyone to watch them while she was gone. Naya was “always available” but Stripy didn’t want Naya to teach her kittens to pick a pocket.

Mavis’s idea has interested other adult cats, and Lunch and Jake changed from a group of seven, to a group of two, dropping their kittens. Judy and Max also turned into a group of two, leaving seven kittens behind.
