
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Harvey has chosen who he will bring camping!

After a few nights with only little bits of sleep, and lots of thinking, Harvey has decided who is going to come on his camping trip happening next weekend. The cats going camping will stay three nights, Friday night, Saturday night, and Sunday night. Harvey has booked a large campsite, which can fit two or three tents, and it has a cooking grill in the middle. There is a small patch of open area for kittens to run around in, which is nice.

Image above - North, who thinks he pushed the “I’m your son” argument enough and he’ll get to go camping.

Cats have been waiting anxiously for Harvey to announce who will go camping and who won’t. Harvey will be reading the names one at a time, and right now he is standing on top of his therapy office, ready to read. “The first cat who will get to come camping is Makenna,” says Harvey. Cats expected this pick, and now Judy knows that her whole family won’t be the ones to come. “The second cat who will get to come camping is North,” Harvey announces, not stopping to listen to cats’ opinions on this pick, “The third, fourth, fifth, and sixth cats who will get to come camping are Stripy and her kittens.”

From what we can pick up, cats think that this is very surprising. But, it got better. “The seventh and eighth cats who get to come camping are Rudy and Blackspots,” Harvey declared, “and the final cats who will get to come camping are... Rudy’s kittens!” When Rudy’s kittens were called, many hopeful cats in the crowd burst into tears. However, cats like Judy and Lunch were angry. But Harvey had stepped down from his podium and was letting his hired security guards do the work. This situation had been anticipated. However, we have been wondering how Harvey chose who got to come. He has told us that he picked the cats who didn’t plead or stay for hours at his door, besides North, who was his son and got a free pass to come. This seems like a reasonable strategy, but it doesn’t make cats like Judy any happier.

Image above - Lunch's kittens, who wish they had gotten to come camping.

“I’m going to stop selling sugar fries to cats over eight.”

- LUNCH, WHO’S ANGRY AND KNOWS THAT THIS WILL AFFECT HARVEY DEEPLY

Some cats are annoyed that Harvey didn’t stick to his “nine cats come camping” strategy, and instead let five extra kittens come. However, Harvey has countered that the campsite is pretty large, and he needs two groups of kittens to come. Rudy and Blackspots are loading up their car, but Stripy has offered to carry their stuff in her pickup truck. While the adults get to know each other a little bit more, Rudy’s kittens and Stripy’s kittens are hitting it off. Lunch’s kittens are sulking with Mavis’s kittens and Naya’s kittens, and they have been thinking of retaliation.

Subscribe again for anger over Harvey’s decision!