
CATS ILLUSTRATED

The NPCEC national finals are tomorrow!

As of now, the national finals of the NPCEC are scheduled to happen tomorrow. Cats are super excited for Harvey, as now he is in contention for some very good prizes! However, he will have to survive three rounds of competitive eating in total, and who knows what three pounds of potato chips would do to a stomach.

Image above - Judy, who hopes that Harvey wins a good prize in the national championship.

Harvey is flying to Washington D.C., as that is where the national finals are. North will accompany Harvey, and they are renting a hotel for two nights in Washington D.C. Both North and Harvey also want to take a look at the city, as that is where Coffee lives. For those of you who have forgotten your facts, Coffee is leader of all cats, and happens to be one of Harvey's kittens. Coffee is also very fond of surprise family visits.

Harvey knows that just by participating in the national round of the NPCEC, he will get a nice statue that marks that he was in the national championships. Harvey is wondering when he will get that statue, but North is assuring him that it will probably happen at the time of the competition, not before. But no other cats are focused on some small statue. Most cats are focused on the prizes for first, second, and third place. Some cats think that the third place prize, two cruise ship tickets, is the best, but other cats think that a large cash prize and a bike, the second place prize, is the real treasure. However, many cats agree that the first place prizes, including a new car, ten thousand dollars, and free potato chips for life, would be the best prizes to get.

In Pawsville, kittens and adult cats are enjoying the new ice and snow. It snowed some more overnight, and now the big sledding hill that kittens love is great for sledding, as it is completely covered in snow. There is a small jump, but kittens are hoping to make it bigger eventually. However, while kittens enjoy sledding, adult cats are making good use of the ice on the lake. Naya's fishing hole plan didn't really work, as the holes froze before any cat was out ice skating. However, Naya will probably try out her plan again, but she'll come by hourly with a large jar of salt.

“I might just sprinkle salt all around the frozen lake...”

- NAYA

get prizes, even if it is only a year-long subscription to Potato Chips Weekly, where you can try crazy things like sugar chips.

Subscribe again for the NPCEC national finals!

Image above - Lunch, who prefers to stay home and play video games with her kittens.