

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

This is the 400th issue of Cats Illustrated!

Today is a big milestone, for us, Cats Illustrated. This is the 400th issue, which is a huge occasion! However, weather is horrible right now in Pawsville, and cats can't really go out into the street and party.

While we at Cats Illustrated celebrate, Harvey, Makenna, Smoke, and Reposado are holed up in Harvey's therapy office, the only place in the property that is being heated right now. The house's heating system is broken, and poor North, who has a big work deadline, has to work in his office currently. North only has a couple space heaters and a warm blanket, and he is still shivering a lot, as temperatures in the house are around forty degrees or even a bit less. Outside, there is a strong wind that is blowing snow everywhere, making going outside to sled very unappealing.

Image above - Lunch, who would've hoped that a celebratory day like this would fall on a day where the weather is nicer.

---

Kittens are hunkered down in their rooms right now, with piles of snacks, drinks, and foods. Kittens know that they need to keep themselves alive, because they are the future. But they also picked their rooms to hunker down in because the doors lock and there is a video game system set up. Adult cats are also playing video games, to make the time pass faster. No kittens are allowed to sled right now, because of low visibility and high winds. But most kittens are content with that, because adult cats aren't really trying to stop kittens from playing video games, either.

Juliet knows that her heater is also very old, and if she had left it on for this whole storm, it might've broken down, too. Currently, it is off, and Blackpelt and her kittens have to huddle together in warm blankets just to keep their body temperature stable. Juliet will look into getting a new heater once this storm is over, as hers will probably break down if she runs it for more than an hour. However, not all cats are having heater problems. Rudy, who has the newest house of all of her sisters, has a high tech heater that is very quiet and has no trouble heating the whole house.

Rudy can also set it to any temperature she likes.

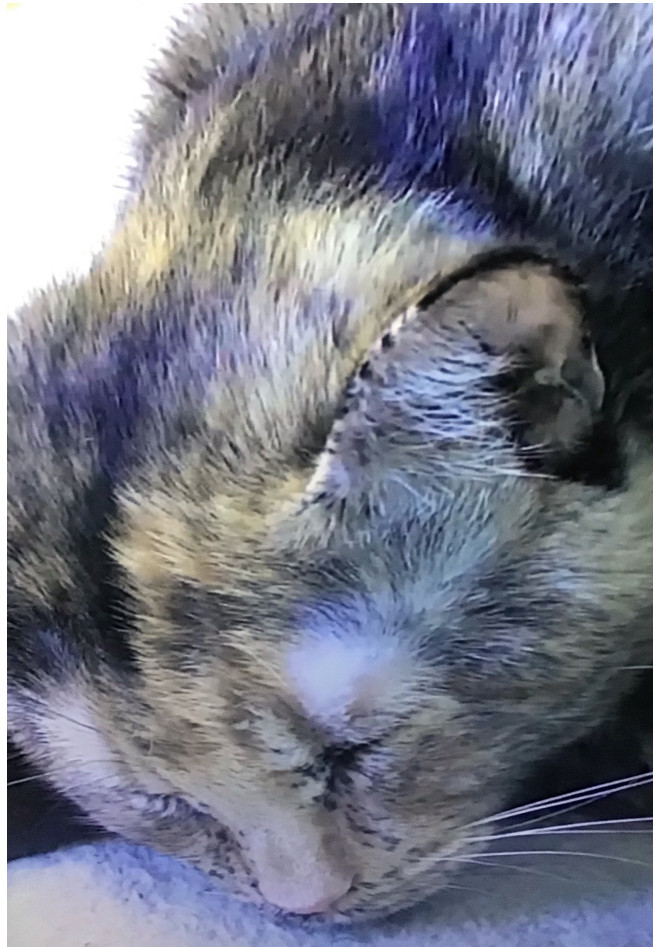

Image above - Judy, who has a decently new heater, but knows that it isn't good enough if Rudy's heater is newer.

“M..m..my f..f..fur is f..f..frozen in p..p..place!”

- NORTH, WHO HAS BEEN IN A
FORTY DEGREE ROOM FOR MORE THAN EIGHT HOURS STRAIGHT

While cats deal with heater problems, Cats Illustrated is celebrating a milestone. It may not be the best day for this occasion, but it will still be special. Our multiple heaters are working just fine, and we have been able to keep our headquarters at a steady temperature, unlike some cats. However, you have to feel sorry for North, who only has a couple of space heaters to keep him warm in forty-degree or lower temperatures.

Subscribe again for more on anniversaries!