

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

Juliet's kittens have gotten a water gun!

As Juliet does not want any more conflict about her kittens not having a catTube account, she instead let them pick something out to buy that is less than thirty dollars. Juliet's kittens picked a high tech water gun, which is seen as a pretty odd choice because it's only thirty-five degrees outside. The water might freeze before it can be shot!

Image above - Harvey, who loves a water gun and all, but thinks that it's a bit early to get one.

---

But Juliet's kittens have a plan. When you get hit with water from a water gun in the heat of summer, it feels refreshing and nice. But if you get hit with freezing water from a water gun in the cold of winter, it's much worse. Juliet's kittens have made deals with other kittens already, offering protection in exchange for snacks. You can always use some reinforcements when you tell your parents that you swiped a twenty from their wallet.

This offer of protection has caught Rudy's eye, and she bought a day's worth of it, giving Juliet's kittens an extra water gun in the process. Rudy was going to go on a daring raid to attack Judy, but she had a feeling that Judy would try to fight back. And that's where Juliet's kittens came in. Two kittens were using the water guns, one kitten shooting with one and the other kitten reloading the other. That way, one kitten could always have a functioning water gun. There was an arrow kitten with a bow, ready to strike from long distance, protected by a shield kitten, a kitten with a very large slab of cardboard. On the front lines, there were two sword kittens, with sharp swords and lots of energy. Juliet's kittens were not kittens to be trifled with.

Juliet is already starting to regret letting her kittens get a water gun. When they were horsing around with it in the driveway yesterday, lots of water spilled onto the ground. Today the driveway was icy, and Juliet had to get some rock salt to melt the ice away so that her car could get out. But what could her kittens do to a house? If water froze on the windows and sides of the house, it would be very hard to get off. And that's what Rudy was planning to do with Judy's house.

“I should start using my water gun, cats pay a lot for protection.”

- NAYA

heated living room. Mavis and Naya are doing similar things, and their kittens are just playing video games in their heated houses.

Subscribe again for more on water guns!

Image above - Lunch's kittens, who also really want a water gun.