Cats have discovered instant ramen!

Yesterday, in a delivery for the grocery store, there was some instant ramen added in. The grocery store thought that it was a mistake, but they still put it in stock anyway. But today, when cats saw the instant ramen in the store, they didn't know what to make of it.

"I bought five of them just because the label said it was instant," says North, who works a lot and needs quick food, "I like alphabet soup, and maybe ramen wouldn't taste much different?" Many cats agree that North does need quick food the most, so he was able to buy his fill without having to fight. But after North left the store, there was a mad scramble for the other cups of instant ramen. “I didn’t try to scramble for any,” says Naya, “I just waited until cats went out of the store, pointed to something that wasn’t there, grabbed some of their instant ramen, and ran off. Foolproof and efficient!”

When North got home, Harvey was curious to see what he had brought. North put his instant ramen in a cupboard, and instructed Harvey not to eat any. North had also bought some soda, which he deposited into his mini fridge. But Harvey is curious, and North knows that. So when North saw Harvey hanging around the cupboard nonchalantly, he knew that he would have to let Harvey try some instant ramen. The instructions on the cup said to take of the top and pull out the flavoring and oil, then fill the cup with boiling water and cover it with something for five minutes. North did this, and then he added the flavoring and oil packets. Now was the big reveal. What did instant ramen taste like?

North picked up some noodles and broth with his spoon, blowing on it, and then brought the spoon to his face. The flavor exploded in his mouth, and he swallowed carefully. But he had learned one thing. Instant ramen was amazing. Meanwhile, other cats were also trying instant ramen, and Stripy was filming an episode for her cooking show where she compared instant ramen with ramen she made herself. But one thing was for sure. The grocery store better get instant ramen in its next restock, because it was an absolute hit.

“I can save time by giving instant ramen to my kittens for lunch every day!”

- MAVIS, WHO IS A BUSY CAT

Right now, the price of instant ramen has gone way up. The very few cats who tried instant ramen and didn’t like it are selling their remaining cups for twenty dollars each. But cats are buying them up, as it can be good to have a lot of a meal that is very tasty and can be ready in five minutes. The wonders of instant ramen are finally being discovered, and it won’t be long before cats discover other instant things, too.
