
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Mavis's kittens are getting a computer!

As she thinks her kittens are mature enough, Mavis is getting a computer for her house. It will be used by her and her kittens, so that they can have more freedom to look up information. However, many cats feel that Mavis's kittens are not mature enough for a computer.

Image above - North, trying to explain to Harvey what a "computer" was.

"I wouldn't give the freedom to use a computer to kittens who find scatological humor funny," says Rudy, "on top of that, Mavis's kittens will probably break the computer really fast!" Lots of cats agree with Rudy, but Lunch also has an opinion. "I think it would be a good thing to give kittens access to computers," says Lunch, "they will be using computers a lot in the future, and why not give them a head start on learning how to use them?" Lunch also has some support, and there are some parent cats around Pawsville who have looked into getting a computer.

Today, Mavis's computer arrived. Right now, she is setting it up, and her kittens are watching her very intently. Mavis has put a time limit on the computer, even though that time limit will affect her, too. Just now, Mavis has finished setting up the computer, and she is letting her kittens explore it. But that might not be the best thing to start with. Mavis's kittens went right to an online gaming site, which was not what Mavis was hoping for. She wants her kittens to use the computer for educational purposes, not just for gaming online.

Lunch has also ordered a computer for her home, and her kittens are very excited for it. However, the fact that Lunch is getting a computer has concerned Juliet. She doesn't want her kittens to get sucked up into some online world, and she had gone as far to tell her kittens not to go to Lunch or Mavis's house, and that they will not get their own computer. Juliet's kittens are mad at their mama, because they want to get in on the computer fun that is happening right now.

Image above - Judy, whose kittens already have computers.

"I don't think it would be too difficult to swipe a computer."

- NAYA, WHO WOULD RATHER STEAL THAN BUY

Some older cats in Pawsville, like Harvey, do not know what computers are. Today, North explained to Harvey that you can look up stuff on a computer, and that you can order sugar cubes on a computer. Harvey has realized that computers are a lot like catPhones, just with a larger screen. That realization may have some side effects, and North probably shouldn't have told Harvey that he could order sugar cubes online. Right now, Harvey is using North's computer, and has ignored all requests from North to open up the door of North's office so he can come in and work.

Subscribe again for more on computers!