
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Judy wants to film a movie about Pawsville!

As Pawsville is such an interesting town, Judy has decided that she wants to make a movie about it. Many cats are intrigued by the idea, and a few cats are showing full support of it. We agree that it would be fun to make a movie about Pawsville, if we could have ads in it.

Image above - Judy, who thinks that this movie would be a hit with cats around the country.

"I think a movie is a great idea," says Lunch, "I think it's really important to show cats around the country how we function in a small town like Pawsville! Besides, I'm sure many cats would want to come to my luncheon after seeing the movie." However, not all cats are as enthusiastic as Lunch. "I don't want my kittens shown publicly in a movie," says Juliet, who is protective of her kittens, “if they do end up in the movie, I will ask Judy to blur their faces out.” Juliet’s kittens are extremely unhappy about this, because they had dreams of starring in a movie and becoming famous.

Harvey, who has been recovering from being locked in his house for the past few days, is also in favor of this movie. He thinks that it would be great for cats outside Pawsville to learn what life in a small town was like, and how there were video games even though Pawsville was very far-flung. However, Harvey seems to want the movie to center around himself and his love for sugar cubes. But other cats have other ideas, too. Rudy wants Judy to film her relaxing in her large house, and Mavis wants to do a cabbage-juggling act for the movie. Judy is not sure what she wants to include yet, and she has retreated into her house to escape the crowds of cats outside her house, shouting about movie ideas they had.

Image above - Harvey, who is disappointed that his movie ideas aren't as widely supported.

Most kittens want the movie to center around themselves. Rudy’s kittens want to show off their room, and Naya’s kittens want to do a pickpocketing demonstration. Stripy’s kittens want to have an academic test in the movie, where they star with their amazing grades. However, the cat who has had the most support of their idea is Naya.

She wants the movie to be about her, where she fights, gambles, and tricks her way through Pawsville to get some kind of treasure. But the only reason she has so much support is because cats who didn’t support her got threatening notes in the mail.

“We should make our own movie!”

- JULIET’S KITTENS, THE FIRST TO FIGURE OUT THAT THEY DON’T NEED JUDY

Judy does not know what she wants to put in her movie yet, though all of the cats around her have ideas. Even her kittens and Max occasionally burst out with something, and

Judy is feeling very tired of being pestered constantly, even by her own mate and kittens.

Subscribe again for more on this movie!