
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Naya has been stealing from kittens!

For an unknown reason, Naya has been stealing stuff from kittens in the past few days. This has made parent cats very concerned, as there is already enough theft in Pawsville and they don't want their kittens to be the victims of it. However, Naya has been very elusive, and no cat has had a chance to talk to her about her intentions.

Image above - Lunch, who is not happy with Naya right now.

Juliet is extremely concerned about this situation, and she has told her kittens that if they see Naya, they should run and get help. This might be a little over the top, as Naya is just stealing candy bars and loose change, not anything too important. However, this is still a problem, and parent cats are going to confront Naya at the next chance they get. Believe me, those confrontations might get physical if Naya unleashed her smart aleck personality on the parent cats.

Kittens have seen this whole situation in a different way, though. When they get robbed, their parents want them to stay home from school for a couple of days, and kittens can play video games during that time. Kittens have the basic idea in their heads that if they get robbed, they get to play video games. Today, Rudy's kittens stood out on the sidewalk, and pretended to drop small wads of cash and then pick them up slowly. And when Naya saw the fish sandwich sticking out of Rudy Jr.'s backpack, she went in for the goods. Rudy's kittens ran back home, fake crying, and Rudy is making them stay home from school for two days. It all worked out, and Rudy's kittens will be able to enjoy a lot of video games while skipping school.

Even Naya's kittens have been on the wrong side of this situation. Today, Naya pocketed their allowance for herself. But Naya's kittens are sneaky, and they stole it right back when Naya was off stealing things from other kittens. However, even Naya's kittens don't know why she has been stealing from kittens in particular recently, and it seems that Naya has her own personal intentions that she doesn't want to share. Still, parent cats agree that this should be put to a stop, and that they shouldn't have to keep their kittens home from school anymore because there is a thief on the streets of Pawsville.

“Naya is a troubled soul. We must cleanse her of her darkness.”

- MAVIS

Naya has not been caught yet, but when she is, the confrontation may not just consist of words. However, it might be hard to catch Naya, as she knows how to lie low from experience. Naya's kittens are being grilled about the location of their mama, though even they don't know where she is right now.

Subscribe again for more stealing from kittens!

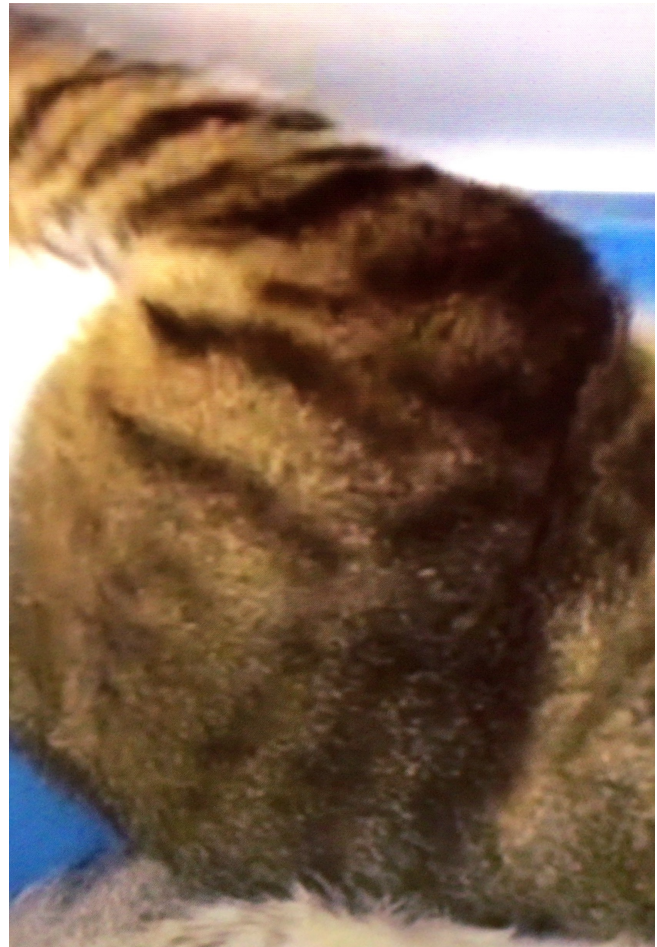

Image above - Harvey, who is relieved that Naya isn't stealing things from him.