
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Rudy's house has been trashed!

Today, when Rudy, Blackspots, and their kittens got back to their house, they got a nasty surprise. It was a mess, tables were overturned, cabinet doors were hanging off one hinge, and the contents inside had been ripped open and spilled.

Image above - Lunch, who can't believe it.

Rudy was very shocked, as her house was in ruins. Her kittens were also very affected, as their favorite video game console had been stolen and their room was ransacked. Rudy has promised her kittens that they could get a new game controller, and that she is going to punish the cat who ransacked her house. However, that information is not yet known. Naya's kittens have openly said that they thought about stealing from Rudy's house, but they didn't. Naya has also confirmed this, and she is claiming that she had no part in the ransacking of Rudy's house. And when she passed the polygraph test, it was proven.

This has reawakened cats' memories of a certain thief who was at large in Pawsville for a few days. Some cats think that this thief may be back, and they are going to steal some more. However, other cats believe that there is a new thief in Pawsville, and some believe that Rudy's kittens ransacked their own house as a prank. This is not true, but cats can believe what they want. Right now, Rudy and Blackspots are working with other parent cats to get help cleaning up their house, and their kittens are staying over with Lunch. This is an important matter, and it will help if kittens are elsewhere. Besides, Lunch's kittens have a perfectly functioning game system!

Some cats are getting paranoid that their houses may be the next to be ransacked, and they are hiding their belongings and buying lots of security cameras. The police are telling cats to be on alert, and if they see a theft in progress, phone it in. However, cats' panic is making them phone in things that are not worthy of the police. Naya's kittens were reported for picking up a five-dollar bill that a cat dropped and keeping it, and Juliet's kittens were taken to the station after they were caught taking too many samples from a "Free samples" plate at the grocery store.

"I wish I could take credit for messing up Rudy's house, but I didn't do it."

- NAYA

Rudy and Blackspots are very distressed at the ransacking of their house, and they definitely want to catch the thief who did it. However, right now they are focusing on just repairing their house, as they need to have a suitable place to live in once school starts again, and things go back to normal.

Subscribe again for more ransacking!

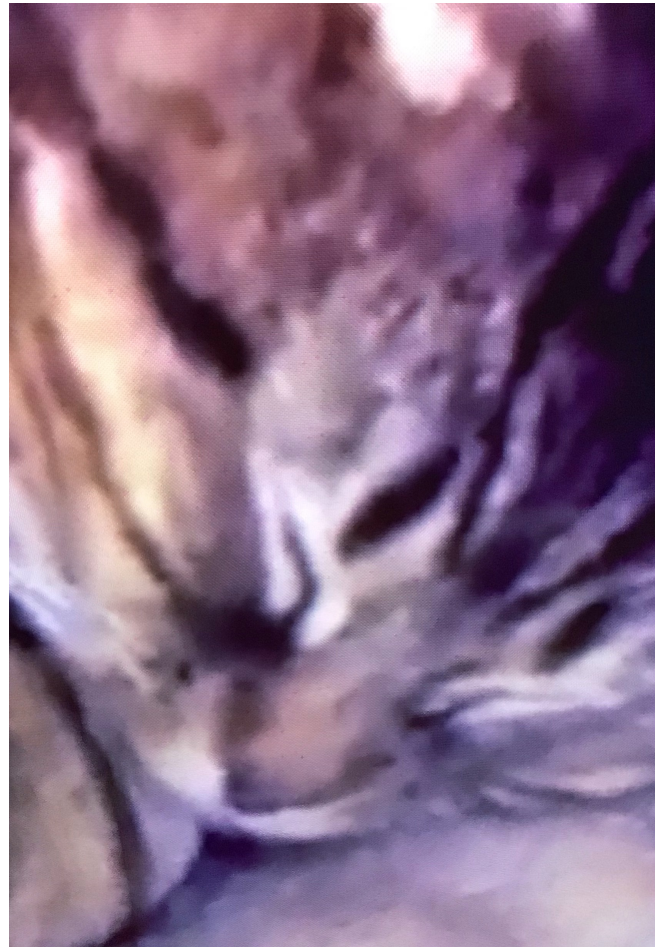

Image above - Harvey, who is offering therapy for any cat who needs it.