
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Cats are celebrating Easter!

Though there are many other issues in Pawsville right now, everything must be put on hold as today is Easter. Many kittens have already done egg hunts in their own houses, and candy is plentiful. But of course, there are problems.

Image above - Rudy, who enjoys this holiday, despite being an adult cat.

Naya is famous for stealing the Easter candy of kittens, so this year, many kittens have hidden their stashes in ways that would make the Easter Bunny proud. It will definitely not be easy for Naya to steal any candy now, but unfortunately, she has taken it as a challenge. But there are other problems, too. For some reason, Mavis's kittens got cabbage-flavored candy in their Easter Baskets, and they gave it all to Mavis. That made her very happy, but the situation kind of makes you think...

In addition to cats having Easter Egg hunts in their own houses, there are some events for kittens in Pawsville's park. Naya will be there, to cheer on kittens who steal eggs from other kittens' baskets and of course, she will be there to steal candy. There is a giant Easter Egg hunt around the whole park, and then there will be some events where kittens run and grab as many Easter Eggs as they find in an open field. This event is known to be dangerous, as an unlucky kitten who falls can get trampled by the kittens behind them. This year, there will be adult cats in the field too, watching out for cheaters and helping hurt kittens.

Easter is one of the times of year when kittens get a lot of candy, along with Halloween, though that is bigger. However, kittens do pull in a lot, and adult cats are thinking about having a new system where kittens can only keep a certain amount of their haul. This idea has outraged kittens, and adult cats know that they probably won't be able to confiscate much, no matter what. That's if they can even find the candy. Like we said before, kittens have already hidden their candy extremely well, and if Naya hasn't stolen it yet, then it won't be found unless kittens want it to be found.

Image above - Judy, who doesn't try to confiscate her kittens' candy, just asks for a small fee of a couple chocolate bars.

“Does an egg have candy in it, like an Easter Egg?”

- WILBUR SPOTS

This candy fest has already started, and adult cats know that they will be dealing with very jumpy and high-energy kittens in the next few days. Easter just does that. However, after the celebrations over, after kittens wake up tomorrow, adult cats will be ready to search for stashed candy, and then talk with their kittens about what to do with it. Kittens suspect this, and they have different methods of dealing with it. A, they can eat all the candy today, B, they can lock up their parents, and C, they can hide the candy somewhere their parents would never look.

Subscribe again for more on Easter candy!