

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

North is worried about Harvey's sugar intake!

As Harvey is getting older, North is becoming increasingly worried about Harvey's sugar intake. Yesterday, Harvey ate half a pack of sugar cubes and a large serving of sugar fries from Lunch's Luncheon. Harvey is claiming that his body is used to the sugar, but North has countered with the fact that Harvey's body is changing, as he is getting older.

Image above - Juliet, who doesn't know why North wasn't worried before now.

---

Right now, North and Makenna are thinking up ideas for how to control Harvey's sugar intake. Just today, North drove to a town near Pawsville to pick up a dispenser. He is drilling it into the wall right now, and putting all of Harvey's sugar cubes inside. This way, North can toggle the settings of the dispenser to let Harvey have more or fewer sugar cubes, and when he can have them. However, North knows that it will take a while for Harvey to get over sugar, and so to start, North set the amount of sugar cubes to be released every day to twenty, because that was Harvey's normal dose.

In the future, North hopes to whittle down that number, but it will take time. Also, the dispenser idea has some problems. North put it up in the hallway, and every once in a while a cat will not be looking where they are going and bump into it accidentally. One time Smoke was actually running, and he hit the dispenser so hard that it shifted in the wall, letting a few sugar cubes drop out of the hole where it had been torn away from the wall. Harvey ate those sugar cubes before any cat could stop him, and Smoke was rushed to the hospital to be checked out. Because of this incident, North is moving the sugar cube dispenser to his office, as he is already accustomed to avoiding piles of junk and things jutting out of the wall.

Image above - Rudy, who can't say that this idea is going well so far.

Unfortunately, putting the dispenser in his office has caused yet more problems. Now Harvey is waiting in there for when the next sugar cube plops out of the dispenser, and North cannot focus on his work. He had made the decision to move the dispenser one more time, but this time for good. Now it will be in the kitchen, above the stove. This way, Harvey cannot get any sugar cubes while a cat is cooking, which makes it impossible for him to fill up on sugar before a meal.

“I could probably figure out how to cheat a dispenser - if you want.”

- NAYA, TALKING TO HARVEY

This sugar cube dispenser idea is turning out to be more complicated than any cat thought. North is very tired from moving the dispenser around, and drilling new holes for it in the wall. However, hopefully its new placement will work well, as North is not going to move it again no matter what.

Subscribe again for more on sugar cube dispensers!