

---

CATS ILLUSTRATED

---

North is thinking about taking a job as a realtor!

As the new development near Pawsville has finished construction on one house, they are looking for realtors to show it and try and get buyers for other plots of land. The developers sought out North right away, as he is in the behavior industry and knows how to read cats' opinions.

Image above - North and Harvey, talking over this new job.

---

North is tempted to take this part-time job, but it would make his work hours even harder. His boss at Behavior and Co. agrees that being a realtor would be a great idea, but North wouldn't get any work cuts to help fit it in. This had made taking this job a very hard decision for North, as he will have almost zero free time during the day. However, North is persistent, and he even went as far as telling his boss that he would consider quitting, if his boss didn't even try to make accommodations for North if he took the job. North is a valuable worker, and his boss knows that. Right now, they are working out a deal for cutting work hours.

The job will last a few months, and during that time, North will show the model house to different cats and try to convince them to buy plots of land on which their new houses will be built. Since North is an expert in behavior, he will be able to judge cats' opinions of the model house, and then suggest options to them. North has decided to take the job, and the developers of the new construction project are telling North how to act. He may be a behaviorist, but he does not have that much experience talking in social settings. Right now, North is learning about how to introduce the house and its different additions, and how to best convince a cat that it is worth buying a plot of land to get their house built on.

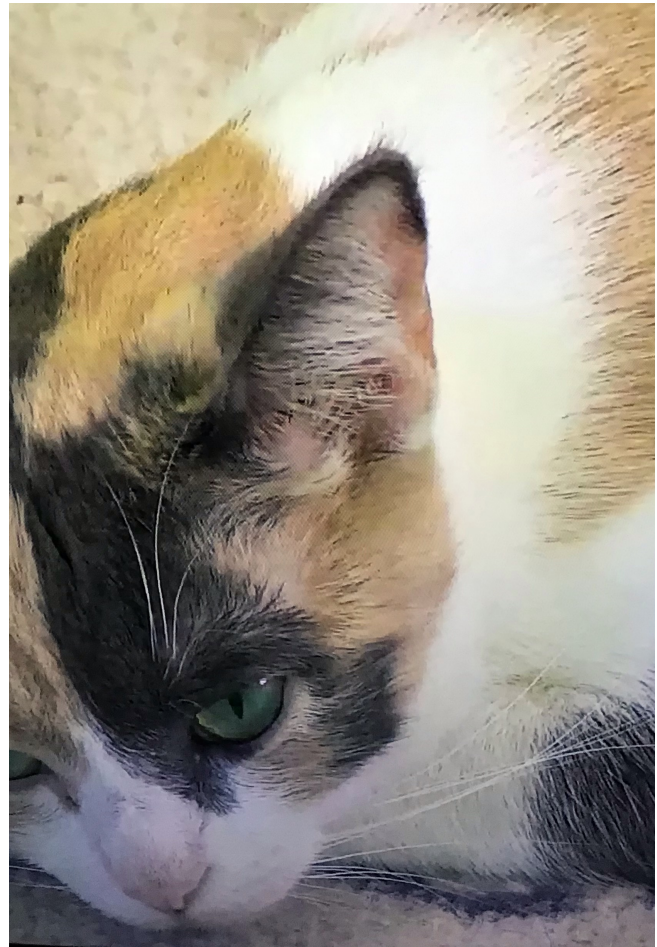

Image above - Juliet, who doesn't understand realty, but doesn't care.

In Pawsville, many cats do not understand realty. So, to make it clearer, we will explain. North is trying to sell plots of land that the developers of this new complex will build houses on. North will try and convince cats that their new houses will be very cool, and he will talk with any possible buyers about house additions. He will use the model house as an example of what a buyer's house could look like when it was done.

“We’d be good realtors! Adult cats always listen to kittens!”

- LUNCH’S KITTENS

Cats are very eager to hear how North’s job goes, as it is something no cat in Pawsville has experienced. Cats will also want to meet potential buyers, and see who their future neighbors might be. Naya may also want to meet potential buyers, to see if they are worth stealing from or not. However, cats just want to see how this new job goes for North.

Subscribe again for more on realty!