
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Cats are discovering popsicles!

Even though the big heat wave is over, cats are still looking for ways to stay cool. There will be more heat waves to come as well, and cats want to be better prepared for the next one. And that was when cats discovered the wonders of popsicles.

Image above - Juliet, who doesn't know how she didn't know about popsicles.

Rudy was the first to notice the popsicle section at the grocery store yesterday. She was curious about them, so Rudy bought a few boxes. And when she got home and tried them, Rudy got a big surprise. Popsicles were amazing. However, when Rudy got back to the store to buy more popsicles, they were almost sold out. Word had gotten around fast, and cats were buying up as many popsicles as they could as fast as they could. The grocery store is probably very happy that their new product got so much support, and they will definitely order more in their restock.

Popsicles are perfect for cats who think ice cream is too sweet (I know, how can any cat think that), but want something cold to eat. Popsicles are fruit-flavored, nicely sweetened, and very cold. They are a hit with kittens and adult cats alike, and some greediness is starting to kick in. Kittens are stealing popsicles from the freezer and eating them before their parents know what happened, and parent cats are hiding popsicles for themselves before they even reach the freezer. Other cats are rationing the popsicles, cutting them up into tiny pieces and eating one bite every few minutes. Right now, the only thing cats can think about is popsicles.

Mavis's kittens and Rudy's kittens are fighting to corner the popsicle market. Mavis's kittens were able to buy more popsicles, and they have a freezer to store them in. Rudy's kittens also got popsicles, but they have a larger freezer that could accommodate more popsicles in the long term. Still, the popsicles are selling fast, and it is giving kittens ideas. For her birthday, Mavis's kittens got their mama a weird kit that was supposed to make popsicles. At the time, Mavis and her kittens thought popsicles were some kind of toy, but now, that kit is valuable.

“I had a box of popsicles in the freezer — and now they're gone!”

- NORTH, DISTRAUGHT

many cats thinking in that way, we think that this popsicle frenzy may stay around for quite a while.

Subscribe again for more on popsicles!

Image above - Judy, who steals her kittens' popsicles for herself.