A drive-in movie theater is being built near Pawsville!

Recently, when they were passing through, some developers decided that they wanted to build a drive-in movie theater in Pawsville. Cats are very curious about what a drive-in movie theater is, but they will find out soon enough.

Surprisingly, most cats in Pawsville have never been to a proper movie theater. It isn't worth it to drive an hour to go to one if you have a perfectly good TV and snacks right where you are. However, a drive-in movie theater is a different experience, and cats will want to try it out. But it will not be built for a month, and for now cats will have to wait it out. Kittens are excited to at least have some kind of movie theater in their town, though one that you can drive into still seems strange. To clear things up, we might as well give the definition of a drive-in movie theater. There is usually a big field that you can park in, with a very large screen on one side. You connect your car speakers to the movie, and you can watch it from your car.

Of course, as this is a movie theater, there will be a place to get snacks. The developers plan to get a wide array of them, from chips to freshly popped popcorn to soft pretzels. But now most kittens are more interested in the snacks than they are in watching a movie, even though the two are meant to go together. Parent cats are also excited about this new theater, but they are curious about what kind of movies would be shown. The developers have assured parent cats that there will be two separate screens, one showing movies for kittens and another one for adult cats. This has made adult cats very happy, but kittens will want in on those movies.

Harvey is excited for this new drive-in movie theater, though it isn't as if he needs it to watch movies. His eighty-two inch TV shows most movies just as good as you would see them in the theaters. In addition, Harvey's stash of sugar and candy is right at hand. So while Harvey may go to the drive-in movie theater to see what it is like, he will probably still prefer watching movies on his TV.

"I don't loiter. It's much easier to steal!"

This drive-in movie theater is a new thing to cats, though it will probably be very fun. Kittens will try to get into the movies for adult cats, though they will probably be stopped at the gate. The snacks will probably sell out by the end of the first movie, and cats will loiter around the property waiting for the snack restock to come so they get first pick of the new snacks.
