
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Cats are planning summer activities!

As school is nearly out for kittens, parent cats have started planning summer activities. This includes outings, parties, and get-togethers, which has many kittens very excited. Rudy has been thinking about starting to use her pool again, and maybe even charging money to use it.

Image above - Rudy, who plans on hosting a summer pool party.

Lunch's Luncheon is offering a catering service, which has already been very popular with cats. The new menu's cold sandwiches and salads would go great at a party, and Lunch has gotten quite a few calls asking if she could cater a party. However, there were too many cats for catering, so Lunch just decided to cater for the cats who offered the most money for the service. But Lunch's Luncheon isn't the only restaurant doing catering. The Wish for Fish is out of most things these days as it is catering so many parties already. Even Taco caT got an offer to cater a work dinner for Behavior and Co., which was surprising.

Even though there are a lot of parties being planned, kittens have not been invited to most of them. Lunch was planning to host a party in the outdoor patio of her luncheon when it was finished, but her kittens had not gotten an invitation. Rudy has been preparing to host a pool party, but when her kittens asked why they couldn't bring any friends, Rudy told them that they wouldn't be coming to the party. Kittens are not happy about these decisions, and they know how fun the parties would be. There would surely be beer, and other drinks. There would be a delicious catering service, but kittens would miss all of the fun. So to make their parents jealous, many kittens are planning to host parties of their own.

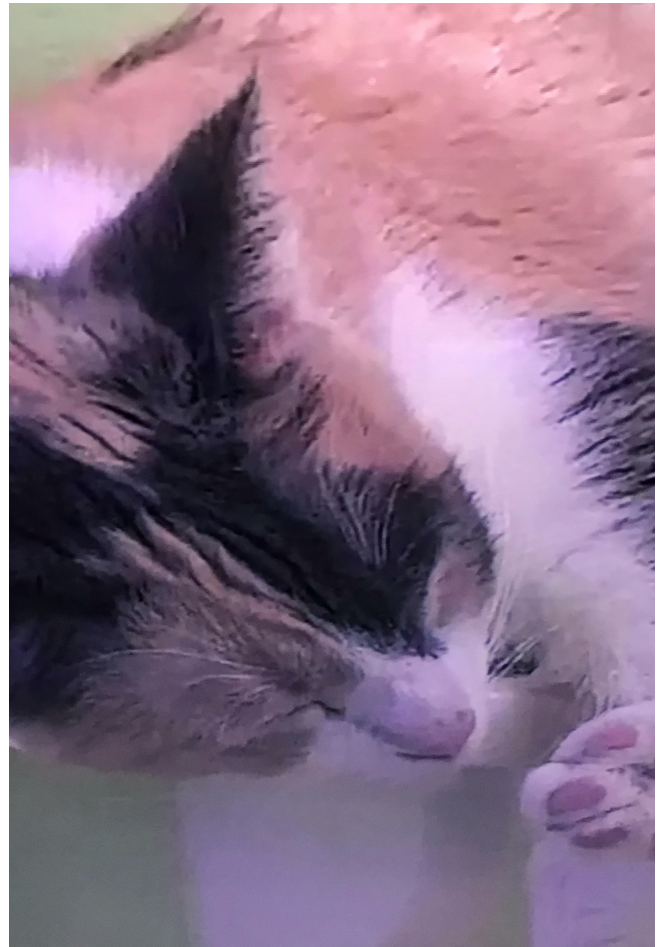

Image above - Juliet, who doesn't want her kittens to go to any parties either.

One of the only cats who is not planning to go to any parties is Mavis. She was told by an oracle that something bad would happen when many cats gathered together, so Mavis is steering clear of parties. Her kittens have not been allowed out of the house except for school, and it does not look like their mama will approve if they go to a party after hours.

“Tell me this.
Does the meat in the mystery
meat tacos ever
taste the same?”

- HARVEY, TRYING TO CONVINCE
NORTH NOT TO GO TO THE WORK
DINNER FOR HEALTH REASONS

Parent cats have heard about their kittens' plans to host parties of their own, and they are shutting down those efforts. The two sides are arguing, and Juliet's kittens went as far as to say that they would crash their mama's party if she didn't let them throw one of their own. Juliet has told her kittens that she will lock them in their room if they tried to do that, which is not something that Juliet's kittens want to happen. Right now, it looks like adult cats will be the only ones hosting parties.

Subscribe again for more on summer parties!