
CATS ILLUSTRATED

Cats are getting concerned about summer fashion!

As summer is here, and cats are going to gatherings and parties, they have started getting concerned about fashion. In the past few days, cats have ordered more summer clothes than they have in their life. That might sound crazy, but if you saw Rudy's room right now, you would understand why we said what we said.

Image above - Lunch, who would like to look stylish going to parties.

Parent cats are looking for places to store their new clothes, but they are having space problems. Juliet filled her closet, Blackpelt's closet, and still had extra clothes. She is starting to wish that she didn't get so many clothes, and other parent cats are thinking the same. But to look on the bright side, they probably won't have to go shopping for summer wear again. Ever. But while adult cats have all the clothes they could want, kittens are not so lucky. They have also picked out things that they would like to have, but unlike adult cats, kittens cannot just click a button and enter a credit card number. They have to buy things with cash or convince their parents to get them something.

These last few days of school for kittens have quickly turned from fun to annoying. At school, some kittens are boasting about cool new clothes they got, which does not help anything. Right now, it seems that every kitten in or out of school is thinking about summer clothes that they would like to get, and how they can look fashionable going to parties. This is a reminder of the fact that most kittens will not be allowed to go to parties, and being in school is pretty miserable right now. And unfortunately, when kittens get home, the first cats they see are their parents. All that built-up jealousy and annoyance can sometimes just fly out. But to adult cats, their kittens are just acting out. And that means consequences.

Kittens are very frustrated about how they are not allowed to get new clothes or go to parties, and they have been planning a bit of revenge on their parents. Lunch's kittens have already acted, and they got some mystery meat tacos from Taco caT and put the meat into some chicken sandwiches at Lunch's Luncheon. Better yet, Lunch had made one of those sandwiches for herself, and she nearly gagged on the mystery meat.

“Maybe mama will let us buy something cool if we make up an omen!”

- MAVIS'S KITTENS

Kittens will probably keep punishing their parents for a while, or at least until they get what they want. However, kittens don't really see the logic that if they make their parents angry, they definitely won't get to go to parties or buy any new clothes. But if they can stay anonymous, it could work.

Subscribe again for more on summer fashion!

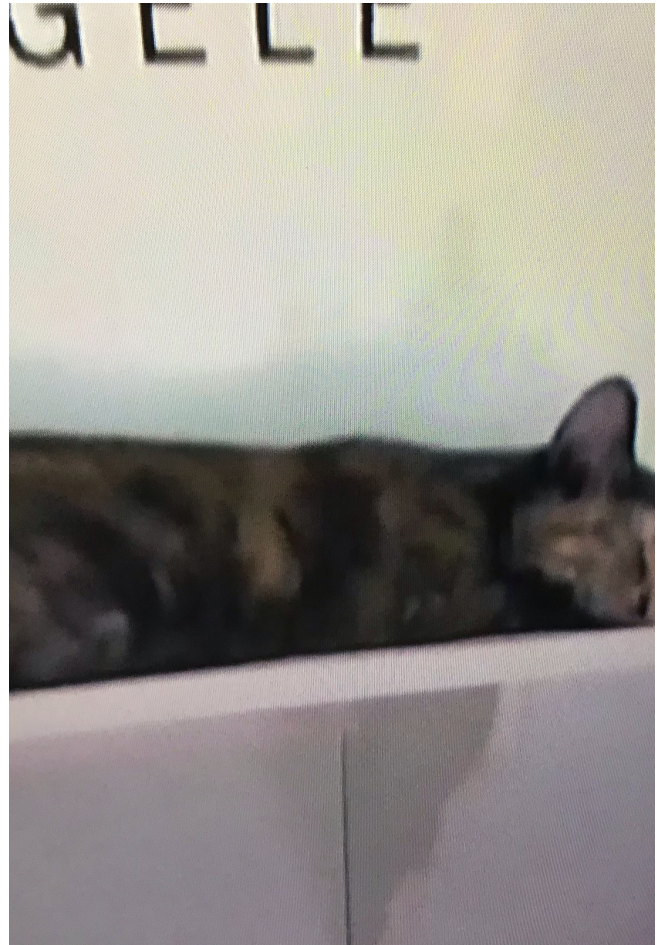

Image above - Judy, whose kittens are grown up and don't have to bother her if they want to buy something.